Konoye Asks Roosevelt to Meeting at Sea

Roosevelt Planning to Spend More, Speed Arms; New Board To Curtail Civil Production

President Stresses The Use of Existing Factories to Turn Out Defense Goods

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday announced an immediate step-up in national defense spending, production and conversion to military output of factories now producing purely civilian goods.

The President told White House reporters more money will be spent for defense and more military products turned out. Emphasis will be placed in increased use of existing plant facilities, he said.

A request for a new over-all appropriation to backlog the new spending pace, in addition to the previously announced lend-lease estimates, will go to Congress soon, he disclosed.

New lend-lease needs, which have been roughly estimated between five and six billion dollars, will be outlined in a message early next week, sometime in advance of the over-all estimates. The President did not disclose how much will be sought in defense funds over and above the 53 billion now appropriated or authorized.

Points to Old Factories

Just back from Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters what he meant by his Labor Day declaration that America must achieve infinitely more in defense production. He said he meant simply to spend more money and turn out more products.

He stressed that a larger portion of defense funds will be devoted to old factories, now largely in civilian production, instead of building new plants.

He said it was correct that not enough defense orders have gone to the smaller factories and that steps are being taken to correct this.

Three-Shift Schedule

Due to the priorities system certain plants will have to stop making things purely for domestic use, he said. The slack in many such cases, he inferred, would be taken up by placing defense orders that can be handled either with present equipment or after conversion for defense use.

Accompanying the new defense tempo, the President said, will be

President Decides On War Building To House 20,000

The controversy over the War Department Building design and site was settled yesterday when the President announced at a press conference that the structure will be a five-sided affair, house 20,000 workers, cost 35 million dollars and rise off the Richmond highway, in Arlington.

The President added that the Arlington building, to be started within two weeks, will serve the War Department only as "emergency" quarters. Later it will be converted into a depository for Government records, and the War Department will be placed in a new building in the Northwest Quadrangle.

Skeptical Industrialists Hold Hopes for New Defense Setup

Copyright, 1941, By The Washington Post.

THE NATION'S industrialists say frankly that they don't know what to think of the newest reshuffling in the defense setup here. They hope it will be effective.

First, they say, it was DAC. Then came OPM, and after that OPACS. Now it is SPAB—the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, a "super" seven-man outfit headed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace.

Is this, the industrialists ask, just another layer on the "tower of committees" that has been climbing skyward in Washington since the fall of France? Has President Roosevelt delegated any real powers to Donald Nelson, who is to be executive director of SPAB? They are waiting to see.

What baffles the industrialists when they contemplate the defense program is the failure of Washington to benefit from the lessons of 1917-1918.

The big, the transcendent lesson of that period, they say, was this: That to achieve top production of the weapons of war, two things are essential—first, a plan; and, second, a hard-hitting No. 1 man with the necessary authority to carry out that plan. So far as the industrialists have been able to observe, the "arsenal of democracy" has had neither.

Industrial As Well as Military

IF THIS had been the first time the United States was called on to gear its matchless industrial machines to war production, the industrialists say, there might have been some excuse for the confusion, the dalliance, and the mountains of red tape that have marked the program of 1940-1941.

But it wasn't the first time. For 24 years there has been available the story of what happened in World War I. It is a story of early fumbling and failure, topped off in the end with a success so brilliant that even the Nazis borrowed from the pattern.

In the days before World War I, Imperial Germany was the only nation that fully realized that war not only was a vast military enterprise, but a vast business and industrial enterprise as well. Germany quickly achieved industrial mobilization, while her foes lagged. However, Germany's appreciation of the economic side of war was not quite thorough enough. She had thought the war would be a quick one, six months or so perhaps, and she had limited her plans accordingly.

When the United States went to war against the Kaiser's Germany on April 6, 1917, it had no plan for mobilizing industry to back up the fighting forces. The result was confusion and chaos. Soldiers had to train in civilian clothes. They went without guns and blankets.

Britain and France had to supply the A. E. F. with most of its artillery and aircraft.

NEVERTHELESS, at the time of the Armistice, the United States was a nation possessed of such striking power as the world had never seen. In both the military and economic fields, the Nation had demonstrated what she could do when thoroughly mobilized.

First War Industries Board Lauded

Credit for America's ultimate triumph on the industrial front went to the War Industries Board. For 11 months there had been turmoil, conflict and time-wasting. Then, on March 4, 1918, President Wilson centralized all authority in a reorganized War Industries Board. Thenceforward, the President was able to concentrate his energies on problems more suited to his talents.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, took care of the industrial front. And one reason he did such a magnificent job, it is now agreed, is that the War President gave him the green light, endowed him with the necessary authority, made him in fact the commander-in-chief on that particular front.

Policy of 'Cutting Off Fat for Muscle' Is Proclaimed By Supply Agency

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

In a boldly worded statement, pointing to a ruthless shutdown or, at a minimum, conversion of less important civilian industries, the new Supply Priorities and Allocations Board committed itself and the Nation to a program of sacrifices and "cutting off the fat."

The key policy announced:

"Every available man and machine must be employed either on direct defense requirements or at work essential to the civilian economy."

The board's statement, made public jointly by SPAB chairman Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Executive Director Donald M. Nelson, followed the agency's first meeting yesterday afternoon after its creation by executive order last Thursday.

Needs to Be Surveyed

First step in the program, Wallace implied, is a gigantic assembly of "complete, detailed and accurate statements of requirements" on all military and essential civilian needs, taking into account the demands of the Army and Navy, economic warfare, foreign aid, indirect military production and staples without which the domestic, nondefense economy cannot survive.

Concurrently, Wallace said, figures will be gathered on the amount of existing materials. In this connection the SPAB alluded to materials "which may be hoarded in the cellars and attics of certain industries and traders" and which must be "routed out" and put to use.

Once needs and supplies are determined, Wallace continued, the board will work, perhaps in connection with other Government agencies, to expand production or to require substitution of other materials.

"Abundance of the Essential"

Apparently committed to a policy of converting civilian industry to defense purposes and actually shutting down factories not needed for defense but which consume vital and scarce raw materials, the board declared:

"We must forego the less essential that we may have an abundance of the essential. By less essential industry is meant those industrial activities involving use of materials and production facilities which sap supplies and machinery resources necessary to a realistic all-out defence program. In some cases this may involve only a part of an industry; in other cases it may involve several parts. Wherever possible to convert the less essential to military or essential civilian production this will be done. Every means will be employed to expedite this process

Dissolving Forces

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Wednesday), Sept. 3.—The German command has been compelled by the enormous continuing losses inflicted upon its eastern armies to rush reserves from occupied Europe, in some cases leaving wounded men to hold those conquered areas, the Soviet general staff declared officially yesterday.

The early morning communique of the Soviet information bureau acknowledged the evacuation of Tallinn, capital of Soviet-ized Estonia. It said the Baltic city (capture of which the Germans announced last Friday) was abandoned after fierce fighting.

Bitter Fighting Goes On

Stubborn fighting continues along the length of the entire Western Front, the communique added.

The information that the Germans were rushing reserves to the Eastern Front was attributed to captured Nazi officers.

It was offered as confirmation of earlier Russian assertions that Hitler's original invading forces were dissolving under the shock of casualties declared already to have mounted to 2,500,000 men with one million of them killed.

Vice Commissar S. A. Lozovsky said that Adolf Hitler had appealed to Benito Mussolini to fill gaps caused by huge Nazi losses on the eastern front. Lozovsky said the plea was the reason for their meeting on the front last week.

Regiment Annihilated

The midday Soviet communique said that in a single sector of the central front about Smolensk—where a Russian counteroffensive was reported still rolling with the aid of "stormer" bombers assaulting Nazi troops from altitudes of a few yards—a German veteran infantry regiment of the 161st Division had been annihilated.

Only eight of ten men survived in each German company, it was

Japan's Premier Seeks To Iron Out Quarrels Aboard a Battleship

President Reported Insisting on Hull's Basic Principles as Condition of Talks

Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Prime Minister of Japan, proposed to meet President Roosevelt aboard a Japanese warship somewhere in the Pacific for a personal discussion of Japanese-American relations in an attempt to reach a pacific settlement, it was learned authoritatively here yesterday.

Konoye's proposal for a conference, modeled on the recent Roosevelt-Churchill meeting in the Atlantic, is understood to have been submitted to President Roosevelt early last week, even before the Japanese premier's note was delivered at the White House last Thursday by Ambassador Nomura.

President Roosevelt is said to have been willing to accept the Japanese premier's invitation for a full discussion of American-Japanese problems contingent on Japan's acquiescence to certain basic principles which, it is understood, Japanese authorities have failed at least so far to meet.

Stand on 1937 Principles

The invitation to the President to meet personally with Prince Konoye came as the climax in a series of negotiations which has been held in the last two weeks, since President Roosevelt returned from his Atlantic meeting with Winston Churchill, the British prime minister. Secretary of State Hull is known to have held several talks with Japanese Ambassador Nomura, both in the State Department and outside, besides last Thursday's meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and the Japanese envoy in the White House, at which Hull also was present.

It has been indicated here that the American position remains based on the principles of policy defined by Secretary Hull in July, 1937, when he advocated adjustment of international problems by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement; faithful observance of international agreements; respect for the rights and obligations of

An Explanation

By Edward T. Folliard

Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador to the United States, yesterday denounced as "ridiculous" and "insulting" a series of newspaper articles alleging that a clique of Vichy agents, working under his direction, was playing the Nazi game in the United States.

Talking to some 40 newspapermen gathered on the terrace of the French Embassy—formerly the John Hays Hammond mansion, 2221 Kalorama road—Ambassador Henry-Haye said that he was "very sad," because he had to make such an explanation to Americans. He recalled that it was just a year ago he had crossed the Atlantic to represent a nation that had been defeated, but which was nevertheless proud of the sacrifices she had made.

He charged that there was a definite aim behind the series of articles which appeared in the New York Herald-Tribune and The Washington Post under the by-line of Ansel E. Talbert. That aim, he said, was to promote a campaign by "certain Americans and Frenchmen" to bring about a "deterioration" in

2 Americans Die in Crash Of Air Ferry

All 10 Aboard Killed As Transocean Plane Hits Scottish Hillside

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 2.—An eastbound transatlantic transport plane previously reported missing has been found wrecked in an isolated mountainous district of the West Coast with all 10 aboard dead, including an American Naval officer and Count Guy De Baillet-Latour of Belgium.

[A United Press dispatch from Glasgow said the plane smashed into a Scottish hillside at an altitude of 1000 feet early Monday as the pilot was bringing the ship in for a landing.]

The American officer was Capt. Sherwood Picking, en route to London to become assistant U. S. Naval Attache. Count Guy De Baillet-Latour, Assistant Military Attache of the Belgian Embassy in London, had been to Washington on an official mission.

A second American lost was Charles Alvan Spence of Little Neck, N. Y., flight engineer of the plane.

Others aboard were:

Bill Up Today, Senate Expects Stiff Tax Fight

Committee Approves It; Two Dissenting Reports Are Filed

The Senate Finance Committee last night reported to the Senate a record national defense tax bill which committee leaders believe would yield nearly one billion dollars more than the $3,672,400,000 estimated by the Treasury.

Indications of a sharp Senate fight developed as minority reports dissenting on controversial points were filed along with majority approval.

Debate will open in the Senate at noon today, and leaders hoped for passage of the bill, with the main provisions intact, by Saturday.

Committee approval was voted the base-broadening and surtax-laden measure at a brief meeting yesterday morning, but the report was not filed until midnight.

Minority dissents by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, challenged, respectively, community property tax provisions and the lowering of individual income tax provisions.

Connally, from the community property State of Texas, teamed up with Senators from the seven other States affected in a fight to defeat

Russian Mission Lands in Kodiak At Navy Air Base

Seattle, Sept. 2. (AP)—Navy headquarters here received a terse message from the new Navy Air Base at Kodiak, Alaska, tonight that the two Russian flying boats that took off from Nome earlier today had landed there at 7:25 P. M. (Pacific standard time.)

The planes carried the 47-man technical military mission en route from Moscow to Washington, D. C.

Anthony Fedotoff, a Russian consul who had flow to Nome from Washington to meet the Russians, was aboard the second plane.

In Washington, the War Department announced that the mission was "purely technical," coming to observe American aircraft plants.

Officials said the Russians would visit a number of aircraft factories but the itinerary was not disclosed. The visitors will confine their activities to observation and will not engage in training.

Air Ministry Describes How U. S.-Made Flying Fortress Beat Off 7-Plane Nazi Attack And Returned, Battered and Smoking, Some of Crew Dead, but With Mission Fulfilled

American Ship Winner in First Big Air Battle

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 2.—The first of Britain's big American-made fortress bombers to be tackled by German interceptors came through a seven-plane assault, battered and smoking, some of the crew dead and others wounded, and returned to Britain, with its mission fulfilled.

The official account of the test was made public tonight—an elaboration of a brief report of the dogfight that ensued August 16 when one of the winged fortresses carried out a high-altitude bombardment of the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau at Brest, France. It did not say how many of the plane's crew were killed.

The air ministry news service, which carried the account, said that the fortress flew at less than the "full ceiling," which is the substratosphere at between 30,000 and 40,000 feet—thus indicating that the five Messerschmitt 109F's and two Heinkel 113's were benefited by the denser air at the lower altitude.

Not many pursuit planes can achieve, for operations, the extreme ceiling of the air-borne fortresses.

"Flying at a great height, but not at the fortress's full ceiling, the bomber crossed the Channel," said the news service.

"Near Brest the bomber was separated from the rest of the detachment. It flew on, attacked and returned by itself.

"Not all the crew saw the bombs burst but the fire-controller, a flight sergeant who is now recovering from his wounds in a hospital, saw one bomb out of a stick burst on the quay just beside one of the battle cruisers. He did not see the other bursts."

A Flying Fortress

Anti-aircraft shells were bursting all around the big plane.

"Three minutes after the bombs had gone, the fire-controller—it's his job to stand with his head in the astro-hatch and watch every part of the sky—saw two Heinkel 113's coming out from a light cloud about a thousand feet below the fortress and slightly to starboard," the story continued.

"They were joined almost at once by five Messerschmitt 109F's. All the fighters appeared to come from the same quarter of the sky. Their arrival was so prompt that it was obvious that they had come from a standing patrol.

"The fighters made many attacks from both sides and from dead astern. Two of the fortress' gunners and the wireless operator were severely wounded. In spite of his wounds the wireless operator continued to signal to his base. The captain swung the bomber quickly from side to side and dived—now fast, now slow.

"Down came all the fighters after him, firing all the while. The fortress' No. 4 petrol tank was punctured and the crew thought the engine had caught fire. As one of them said, 'there seemed to be no part of the bomber not hit.'

"Then when the fight had gone on for 20 minutes the fortress reached a low patch of cloud and all the enemy fighters broke away. Black smoke was now pouring from the bomber.

"The fighters had scarcely left when the fire-controller, though wounded in the hand and leg, tried to reach the other wounded men. To do so he would have had to walk along the gangway which leads from the pilot's cabin to the rear. But the gangway was now covered with a tangled mass of wires and cables and guide ropes along the side had been shot away.

"The bomb doors were wide open below. This was a result of damage done by the German fighters—and the gangway was a narrow bridge over empty air. The fire-controller had to be held back, so anxious was he to get to the wounded men.

"The observer then tried to make a crossing but when partly over he found that a slip was almost certain, and went back for his parachute.

Fought Way Through Strong Patrols to Bomb Battleships

He tried again but this time his parachute was caught and entangled in the wreckage.

"As soon as he reached the English coast the captain made for the nearest airdrome. He still thought the No. 4 engine might be all right.

"With flaps out of action, tail tabs shot away, bomb doors wide open, tail wheel stuck half up and half down, brakes not working, only one aileron any good, and a scarcely controllable rudder, the captain had to land on a strange airdrome that was rather too small for the fortress.

"With his second pilot doing everything he could to help him, he made the landing."

other nations; equality of commercial opportunity—which in the Far East is represented by the policy of the open door—and regularization of trade relations.

The American Government expressed willingness to Japan, in its last diplomatic note of December 31, 1938, to consider treaty revision by negotiation among all the parties concerned in the Far East. Japan, on the other hand, has always insisted upon bilateral negotiations with separate nations.

Relations Difficult

While Mr. Roosevelt was understood to have been pleased by the Japanese suggestion for a conference on American-Japanese relations, there are indications that the negotiations have not developed subsequently in a manner which would lead to hope that such a parley can be brought about.

American-Japanese relations are regarded as particularly difficult of approach because of the situation existing in Japan, where the Konoye government has to contend with various factions within the country, including nationalistic groups that are urging the government to adopt a firmer policy against the democracies and stressing Japan's commitments to the Axis alliance.

Such a group is that headed by Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, a former premier, now director of the Asia Development Federation, a powerful reactionary organization, which has urged the Konoye government to create a so-called "safety zone" in the entire ocean area surrounding the Jauanese islands which would block the way to American ships bearing war supplies to Russia, Gen. Hayashi disclosed to day, according to reports from Tokyo, that the Konoye government was considering this proposal.

Nomura Reported Warned

Any interference with American oil tankers, now approaching Vladivostok with the first cargoes for Russia, would be certain to precipitate a grave situation in American-Japanese relations, according to well informed quarters here. It is understood that the danger of such a development was conveyed to Ambassador Nomura here when he called at the State Department last week to protest the American shipments. Nomura is said to have argued that American policy was discriminatory in sending supplies to Russia and withholding them from Japan.

President Roosevelt held a long conference with Secretary Hull yesterday which is believed to have centered about the Japanese negotiations and the tense situation which continues in the Far East. The tenor of the discussion was kept secret, but it is presumed that the question of American war aid to Russia by way of the Pacific was discussed, together with the complications that might arise in that connection.

It was noted that Mr. Roosevelt stressed, in his Labor Day speech, the decision to "more greatly safeguard" supplies en route to nations fighting aggression, and it was recalled also that Hull warned the Japanese last week that the policy of the freedom of the seas which the United States has continually advocated applies equally to the Pacific.

Talks Still Exploratory

President Roosevelt declined to discuss American-Japanese relations at his press conference yesterday. A question as to whether he had answered the Konoye note was referred to the State Department. Hull earlier referred a like inquiry to the White House.

Hull said at his press conference that there was nothing new in the discussions between the United States and Japan, reiterating that the talks were to be regarded as exploratory. Officials who have been exploring the possibilities of an agreement were inclined to take a gloomy view. One expressed the opinion that the most that could be hoped for at present was that relations would not become further aggravated. This is said to depend largely on what moves Japan may make.

The statement of Col. Itsuo Mabuchi, chief of the army press section of the imperial headquarters, that in the event peaceful means failed, Japan should break the encirclement forcefully, was taken here as an indication of the conflicting situation in Japan with which Premier Konoye has to deal in any negotiations.

'Safety Zone' Urged To Block Soviet Aid

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Sept. 2.—A plan to establish a "safety zone" all around the Japanese islands and thereby possibly shut off the big Siberian port of Vladivostok from American shipments was before Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye today while the Japanese press read a variety of meanings into President Roosevelt's Labor Day speech.

Gen. Senjuro Mayashi, director of the Asia Development Federation, which represents about 60 nationalist organizations, said Prince Konoye had agreed to consider the federation's proposal for a safety zone.

U. S. Supplies on Way

Vladivostok is approachable by sea only through straits between the Japanese islands; so such a program might isolate it just as the first American shipload of aviation gasoline for Russia is nearing Japanese Empire seas.

A Japanese spokesman said new representations against the shipments were being made to Russia and the United States.

Urging maintenance of Japan's present foreign policy, the Asia Development Federation declared, "the United States of late has unreasonably tightened economic pressure against Japan" and supplied materials "to nations hostile to our Axis powers."

Both these American actions must be rejected by Japan, it stated.

"Watchful Waiting"

Nichi Nichi, Tokyo paper, remarked that President Roosevelt had not mentioned Japan in his Labor Day radio talk.

"If silence about Japan means readiness to accept principles laid down by Japan there is some cause for hopefulness, but this country cannot be a party to any scheme which entails the old status quo condition," the paper asserted.

"Japan takes a position of watchful waiting to see what this new silence portends."

Labor Crisis Seen

Nichi Nichi added:

"If the United States hides behind the name of freedom of the seas and objects to Japan's justifiable road, Japan will not hesitate to break through whenever it is necessary."

Both Nichi Nichi and the foreign office paper, the Japan Times and Advertiser, suggested that the Roosevelt speech indicated a labor crisis in the United States.

"Washington fears a possible disintegration of the national production," said the English-language Times and Advertiser.

Going farther, Chugai Shogyo editorially asserted:

"When Roosevelt declared the Hitler Nazi army should be wiped out we believe he meant to say the Axis group should be wiped out as a whole. We consider the United States went too far in declaring an intention to destroy the Axis without participating in the war, but merely by acting as a munitions factory."

Meanwhile Japan heard that the United States had a six-month supply of raw silk and was using 50,000 bales a year to make parachutes.

This word came from Shiro Zuzuki, Yokohama silk expert just returned from three months in the United States.

13 Japanese Attaches Leaving for Home

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Thirteen attaches of the Japanese foreign office, who had been on special duty at the Japanese Embassy in Washington, left New York by train tonight for San Francisco to sail for Tokyo.

"It is our time to go home," was the only explanation they would give of their departure.

Tokyo Rules Waves —On Girls' Heads

Tokyo, Sept. 2 (AP).—Beginning with the fall semester, high school girls of the Saitama prefecture, Tokyo suburb, will not be permitted to bob or wave their hair.

Permanent waves are considered contrary to the spirit of the current national emergency, the newspaper Nichi Nichi explained.

New Defense Board Meets for First Time

The President's Day

By International News Service

SECOND HELPINGS: Along with a second cup of coffee, the President told the Congressional leaders yesterday morning that there must be second helpings in appropriations, taxes, production. Vice President Wallace, representing the National Defense Supplies Priorities and Allocations Board, which he heads, the President said, must spend more money, get more products. Acting Speaker Cliff Woodrum and Senator George, of the Senate Finance Committee, heard about the new spending bill they will receive shortly.

NEW SENATOR, OLD COMPLAINT: Under the wing of Senator Theodore Bilbo, brand-new Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi came to call on the President, howled that Leon Henderson's price-fixing is sure death to Southern pine lumber companies.

LABOR AGAIN: George Harrison, A. F. of L. railroad union executive, called for and got an appointment to see the President at noon, slipped in and out silently. On Harrison's heels came Brig. Gen. Brehon Somervell, Army Architect George Bergstrom, to talk some more with Mr. Roosevelt about the new War Department Building. Whatever they said the President had his way.

ON THE HOUSE: Secretary of State Hull strode into the Big Boss' office for 15 minutes of earnest discussion of the troubles besetting the United States in the Far East and other points without food followed by an hour or more discussion with lunch on the White House.

RED RUMOR: Waiting for the President's press conference to break was Lend-Leaser Averell Harriman, who went in to talk with the President about his impending mission to Russia as head of the American delegation to the Moscow conference. Some 20 minutes later, Harry Hopkins rolled through the White House gates in a black limousine, went briefly upstairs to his room and then joined Harriman, and the President in the Executive Office. In his press conference the President had turned down questions regarding the rumor that the Moscow conference would take place not in the Kremlin but in Washington as "silly"—but previously duped bystanders continued to wonder.

with a minimum loss of time for men and machines. But the less essential must go.

"This means cutting off the fat and hardening the muscles."

Asked if this program, carried out by the allocation of materials and the grant of priority ratings, would produce shutdowns, Nelson replied in the affirmative.

Steps Outlined

Questioned on the use of the word "realistic" and its implication that previous defense efforts have been less than adequate, the Vice President admitted that the program had not yet reached "realistic" proportions.

Although neither the chairman nor the executive director would go into details, they disclosed that the following specific steps were determined on:

1. A plan for conservation on a national scope of all scarce material needed in the defense program."

2. A drive for simplification of models in order to use less materials and machines.

3. A national pick-up campaign of scrap metals, similar to that recently conducted to recover used aluminum.

4. Refusal to grant further priorities to industries which have hoarded excess supplies of raw materials, and, in extreme cases, outright seizure of excess inventories.

5. Effective discouragement of "scare buying against imaginary requirements of the future" the board said. "Real requirements are too immediate and urgent for ust to tolerate the slightest diversion by speculators or others whose actions would destroy our policy of share and share alike the burdens and responsibilities which confront us."

Explanations Promised

The board also promised to explain publicly the basis and reason for each important step it takes.

"The board believes," the statement said, "that if the public knows why it must forego certain comforts; why it must give rather than get, why, in substance, the fat must go and the muscles be strengthened, the cooperation vital to success will be had in full measure.

"Thus, in an hour when free men must unite to defend their freedom, we shall move forward in that spirit which holds that none but the free are strong and none but the strong can be free."

Canada Dovetails Production With U. S.

Ottawa, Sept. 2 (AP).—Canada moved tonight to dovetail her war production program more closely with that of the United States under an order requiring priority ratings for all Canadian war contracts which require materials brought across the international boundary.

The order, issued by Chairman R. C. Berkinshaw of the Wartime Industries Control Board, said:

"Canadian manufacturres working on war contracts must adjust their requirements to the priority rating system of the United States to assure deliveries of equipment and materials of various kinds from United States suppliers."

U. S. to Make Mexico Loan Under Defense Pact

The United States, it was learned yesterday, will make a large loan to Mexico as part of a comprehensive agreement under which Mexico is expected to cooperate with the United States in the economic and military defense of the hemisphere, guarantee to keep all strategic war materials away from the Axis powers and make a final cash settlement with American companies whose Mexican oil properties were seized in 1938.

Part of the loan, it is understood, will be issued for the specific purpose of stabilizing the Mexican currency and the remainder to expedite commercial and defense agreements now in the last stages of negotiation. The size of the loan has not been determined, but it is reported to be between 50 and 100 million dollars.

Though the American loan will not be made specifically to enable the Mexican government to pay off the American oil companies whose property was seized, this will in fact be the effect of the deal, for it will release other Mexican funds for payment of the American claims.

Mexico and Britain To Resume Relations

Mexico City, Sept. 2 (AP).—Diplomatic relations between Mexico and Great Britain, suspended in the 1938 oil expropriation crisis, will be renewed shortly, Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla said tonight.

"As a matter of fact, we have had relations with the English since they began their valiant defense of democracy. These have been spiritual relations. All that is lacking now are the steps of protocol. I believe that will be resolved before long," Padilla said.

No consideration has been given, however, he asserted, to reestablishing long-broken relations with Russia. The foreign minister declined to elaborate this point.

Padilla did not explain whether the impending renewal of relations with England meant that the bitter expropriation controversy had been settled.

"I am speaking only of diplomatic matters," he said.

The foreign minister said Mexico had made no decision on the future of Germany's honorary consuls here since the recent order closing the Reich's 15 Mexican consulates.

"Each case is being studied on its merits," he said. "Many of the consuls were Mexican citizens. Those of German or other nationality may be subject to expulsion."

He added that the government for the present had no plans to close either the Italian or Japanese consulates.

R. A. F. Smashes At Shipping, Plants In Italian Port

Cairo, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—British planes blasted shipping, munitions factories and railroad communications in and around the Italian port of Cotrone in Calabria during a strong attack Monday that "caused violent explosions" and covered the area with "a sheet of yellow flame," an R. A. F. communique said today.

(The Italian high command said that 12 persons were killed and 24 wounded in the attack.)

Direct hits were scored on three buildings at Cotrone, the R. A. F. said, and a merchant ship was hit by three bombs and burst into flames.

"About 100" Axis planes carried out a heavy dive-bombing and high-level attack on Tobruk yesterday, but despite the weight of the raid damage and casualties were negligible, the British said today.

½ Million in Odessa Waterless, Say Nazis

Germans Break Outer Defenses 20 Miles From Leningrad, Berlin Reports

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 2.—The Germans claimed tonight that their troops had brokes through outer defenses to within 20 miles of Leningrad while Rumanians in the south had cut off the drinking water supply for the half million civilians and soldiers in besieged Odessa.

D. N. B., the official news agency, reported that Rumanian troops participating in the siege of the Black Sea port had occupied its main waterworks.

Informed German quarters said the most advanced panzer units stood before Krasnogvardeisk, rail way junction from where they could see the smoke of Leningrad's great factories 20 miles to the northeast.

This advance unit would be only 20 miles west of the Leningrad-Moscow Railroad along a spur line from Krasnogvardeisk, a junction for railways from Pskov, Tallinn and Leningrad. It was said to have reached the town after two weeks of hard fighting from Kingisepp.

Rains Impede Nazis

The head of another column in the ring of steel the Germans said they were tightening about Leningrad was said to have passed Luga, 70 miles to the south. Much booty and motorized equipment and many guns were reported seized in fighting north of Luga in which "strong Soviet formations" were annihilated.

The battle was said to have occurred in the most difficult weather and along roads made impassable by heavy rains. Columns of German soldiers had to carry heavier weapons forward, the German account said.

Cutting off the Odessa water supply, D. N. B. stated, seriously endangered Red army soldiers and civilian defenders of the city, which had been under siege since August 12.

Odessa was said to be already suffering from a shortage of food.

A number of Soviet counterattacks were acknowledged, but the German accounts said all were repulsed. Soviet attempts to regain the western shore of the Dnieper south of Kiev by boat crossings under cannon fire were said to have been thwarted "with heavy losses to the Russians."

D. N. B. reported that German infantry had stormed Soviet positions on heights in the northern sector of the front yesterday and held them against repeated Russian counterattacks.

Although the area of the fighting was not specified, it was indicated that it was on the Leningrad front.

German big guns were said to have destroyed eight of ten Red army batteries which sought to hold up the German advance in the north. In the Viipuri area north of Leningrad the Russians were reported to have suffered heavy losses to the Finns.

On the sea front the Germans reported destruction of the Russian destroyer Straschny by a mine near the Estonian island of Oesel.

War Materials Bombed

The Germans said the Luftwaffe was continuing its destructive work unabated, especially in air attacks on soldiers and war materials in the Leningrad area.

They also reported heavy assaults on railways and communications in the middle sector, and Stuka attacks on western Crimea.

In the middle sector of the front Luftwaffe attacks disrupted three railway routes for Russian supplies, D. N. B. said. Trains standing at railway stations at Lozovaya and another town were said to have been hard hit. One munitions train went up in flames, D. N. B. reported.

Northwest of Lake Timen, which is south of Leningrad, 28 trains were said to have been halted by heavy bomb damage. On the Dnieper, dive bombers were credited with sinking a monitor and six barges. Four other monitors burst into flames after being hit, the agency reported.

Nazi Reservists Fighting Russians

The communique quoted a captured German company commander, First Lieut. Ludwig Roberg, as declaring that his outfit had arrived 10 days ago from Toul in France, and that the whole Toul garrison had at the same time been sent hurrying to the Russian front.

German garrisons in Belgium, Holland, France and elsewhere in the west, he was represented as saying, had been sent up.

"At the beginning of the war," his story continued, "regular army contingents (in the west) were replaced by reservists. Now the reservists, too, are being dispatched to the Eastern Front and replaced by wounded soldiers who as yet have not completed treatment. Many of them still wear bandages."

Soviet military dispatches indicated yesterday that heavy aerial action was in progress to relieve the hard-pressed southern Red armies standing in the lower Ukraine.

Bombers of the Black Sea fleet air arm were reported in running assault on German-held ports and concentrations of troops. A German warship was declared to have been disabled and 83 German tanks destroyed, along with more than 50 armored cars and many tank cars.

Since Saturday the Russians placed German plane losses at 198, with Russian losses less than a third of this figure.

Recalling that two months ago the Germans had claimed to be standing before Kiev in the Ukraine, the government newspaper Izvéstia remarked sardonically:

"They still stand before Kiev."

Before Leningrad in the north—where it was claimed that the markets were still filled with all sorts of food—the Nazis would have no better luck, the paper added.

Division Wiped Out, Say Finns

Helsinki (Wednesday), Sept. 3 (INS).—Annihilation of the Forty-third Russian Division was announced officially in Helsinki early today as a government statement claimed that "the whole north of Finland is now liberated from the enemy and the Russians are being driven everywhere over the old border." The commander of the Forty-third Division, a communique said, was captured.

Nazis Reduce Garrisons

Cairo, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—Reports from Beirut today quoted a Parisian youth arriving there as saying the number of German troops in Paris had been reduced from 60,000 to 20,000 and garrisons in other towns had been cut down similarly.

Louisiana Rain May Bring Horses To Fore in Tactics

By the Associated Press

With Third Army in Louisiana, Sept. 2.—Cavalry weather threatened today to take the "blitz" out of the final stage of Third Army maneuvers before Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger's troops meet the Second Army forces advancing from Arkansas.

Continuous rain had turned southern Louisiana lowlands into a trap for almost any vehicle so that the only really happy outfit—among the Third Army's 250,000 men—was the First Cavalry Division, mostly horsemen.

These cavalrymen from Fort Bliss, Tex., felt they would be the only troops able to move speedily if rain continued during the field tests starting September 15.

Because it has only a shallow covering of solid earth even in dry weather, Louisiana is one of the toughest proving grounds the Army could have chosen to show the prowess of its mechanized and armored forces.

"If we can do a good job here, we can fight any place," one high officer said.

Laborite's Charge of Sabotage In Aid to Soviet Stirs Commons

By the United Press

London, Sept. 2.—A Laborite's charge that British aid to Russia is being deliberately sabotaged in hopes that the German and Soviet armies will exterminate each other tonight stirred a tempest which may bring an investigation by the House of Commons.

The allegation was made in Edinburgh today before the anti-Communist British Trades Union Congress by Jack Tanner, 51-year-old president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, who "named names" high in the British war government.

Tanner asserted that Britain's minister of aircraft production, Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, had "quiet recently" expressed the hope that the German and Russian armies would bleed each other white on the Eastern Front.

This hope in high circles, Tanner said, was based on Britain's ambitions of emerging from the war as the dominant power in Europe.

Challenged by Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, who said he doubted that Tanner's allegation could be substantiated, the union leader retorted:

"It can!"

Moore-Brabazon, in London, declined comment but indicated that he would make a statement later. It was stated authoritatively that Tanner based his charges on a public speech which Moore-Brabazon made recently at Chertsey saying "Everyone fighting there is fighting Britain's battle and for that reason they should be given all help . . . by helping them we are helping ourselves, for every life sacrificed against the Nazis is being lost in fighting our battle."

These quarters added that the speech had been extemporaneous and "open to misinterpretation."

Tanner, in a statement to the Daily Mirror, denied that his charges had been based upon any speech made by Moore-Brabazon at Chertsey but, instead, one which the aircraft minister made on July 31 at Manchester.

The meeting, he said, was in charge of Sir Ernest Simon, then chairman of production in the northwest area.

"I have the necessary proof available and am prepared to bring it forward if called upon," Tanner said. "The matter may be raised in the House of Commons."

Tanner laid before the Trades Union Congress in Edinburgh a motion that "we will defeat any plot which might be in the process of formation that would withhold full and adequate aid to our Allies, and if necessary smash any person responsible for such a policy."

R. A. F. Pounds Berlin, Other Nazi Areas

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Wednesday), Sept. 3.—British bombers attacked this capital last night with heavy explosives and incendiary bombs in one of the liveliest raids of the war.

Three of the planes identified officially as British were reported shot down.

Northern, central and southwestern areas of Germany also were attacked.

The planes attacking Berlin were acknowledged as "strong units" but an official communique said that only a few bombers managed to penetrate antiaircraft defenses to reach the capital's heart.

Apartment houses were damaged in the capital and "insignificant damage" resulted elsewhere, it was said.

Meanwhile German commentators declared last night with obvious satisfaction that for two consecutive nights the Luftwaffe has launched major attacks against Britain after a rather long pause.

Taking note of the British concentration on defense, German military spokesmen declared that "an island is no longer a problem for the German army on the basis of experience in Norway and Crete."

Dienst Aus Deutschland, a commentary close to the Foreign Office, said this statement showed that "the problem of military conquest of England itself should be in the foreground."

3,855 Killed in R. A. F. Raids, Berlin Says

London, Sept. 2 (AP).—The German radio in its foreign service tonight alleged that casualties in R. A. F. raids on Germany were 3855 dead and 9445 injured from the start of the war until August 29.

(Up to March 1, acknowledged British civilian casualties in air raids were 28,859 killed and 40,166 injured.)

No Nazi Planes Oppose R. A. F. In Big Day Raid

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 2.—An American-built fortress aircraft bombed Bremen in the second raid on the big German port in three days by these speedy, high-flying planes during a widespread dawn-to-dusk Royal Air Force offensive today against the German-held continental coast and against Nazi shipping by torpedo-carrying Beauforts in the North Sea.

The crew of the Fortress, which flew the substratosphere to press home the attack, said no German planes were sighted but that ground defenses sent up a terrific barrage of shells which "as they exploded stained with black the white tops of the clouds."

"The port was clearly seen through a gap in the stratocumulus," the pilot added.

The Bremen attack followed one Sunday in which bombs were declared dropped squarely in the middle of the port by a fortress bomber flying in the substratosphere without opposition from the Luftwaffe.

Beauforts pouncing on German ships off the Norwegian coast hit the largest vessel in the convoy with two torpedoes and probably destroyed it, and a hit was scored on an escort vessel, the Air Ministry announced.

In numerous sweeps over northern France and the Channel, the British said, not a single German fighter rose to the challenge. From all the operations only one plane, a Beaufort, was reported missing.

The day's offensive was carried out by R. A. F. planes moving across the southeast English sky with conveyor-belt regularity.

Planes setting out for the attack with heavy loads of bombs were passed in the air by craft returning with empty racks.

Heavy Attack Indicated

Heavy rumbling which rolled back to the English coast indicated that the attack was as heavy as it was prolonged. In one incident, British planes attacked an enemy supply ship off Dunkerque and left it "enveloped in smoke," the air ministry said, despite the fact it was protected by six antiaircraft ships and four E-boats.

The big daylight assault followed a night raid centered upon the German industrial city of Cologne. Other Rhineland points also were raided.

British List Air Figures

London, Sept. 2. (U.P.)—The Air Ministry announced today that 4500 enemy planes were destroyed over and around Britain in the two years of war.

The Air Ministry said the R. A. F. had lost 1400 fighter planes on the home front, but more than 450 pilots were saved.

150 More Americans Arrive in Ulster

Londonderry, Ireland, Sept. 2 (U.P.). A group of 150 American technicians and workers has arrived in northern Ireland, boosting the total Americans here to almost 1,000. They will be employed by the British government and join other Americans working on various projects.

Brazil Panzers to Roll on Independence Day

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 2 (AP).—New mechanized military equipment obtained by Brazil from the United States will have its first public showing in an independence day parade here Sunday.

There will be light tanks, armored cars and trucks which arrived recently in the first shipment of 100 milions dollars worth of war supplies on order.

Vichy's Ambassador Denies Embassy Aides Act as Spies

Franco-American relations.

With a Gallic gesture that took in the vine-covered embassy overlooking Rock Creek Valley, the French envoy said of the Free French de Gaullists:

"I know that there are Frenchmen who would like to occupy these wonderful premises. I don't blame them, I wish them good luck.

"As far as I am concerned I have the duty of carrying on my duties here with patriotism."

The French envoy took up the charges contained in the newspaper series and sought to refute them categorically. He said later that he would ask for an audience with Secretary of State Hull and tell him what he was telling the reporters. In essence this was that he and his embassy staff were playing only one game in the United States—"the French game."

He denied that Frenchmen connected with the embassy were acting as spies or that there was a French Gestapo in the United States. He denied, too, that he had sent to Vichy any information concerning the activities of the Free French in this country. He said that he had reports on such Frenchmen, but had kept them "under my elbow" because he was not inclined to send such information to Vichy.

Asked where he got such information, he said it was readily obtainable from American newspapers.

The Ambassador's emotionalism increased as he took up the charges against two members of his staff—Capt. Charles Brousse and Col. Georges Bertrand-Vigna. Capt. Brousse had been accused of maintaining close personal contacts with Herbert von Strempel and Ernst Osterman von Roth, the first and second secretaries of the German Embassy here.

He denied that Capt. Brousse had maintained any such contacts with the Germans. He said he himself did not call at the German Embassy when he came over here, and has not called since.

The Ambassador said that Capt. Brousse had been an aviator in two wars and had been cited for bravery five times. Turning to the case of Col. Bertrand-Vigna, who wears a black patch over one eye, the Ambassador said he had been cited seven times and wounded five. He was the first man, he recalled, who placed foot on Norwegian soil at Narvik last year.

Discusses Musa

"How can he be accused of being a German agent?" Henry-Haye asked vehemently. "I don't know. There is nothing in his correspondence to give any such suggestion.

"I wonder if Mr. Talbert has the same record for fighting as these two men. I don't want to go into a polemic, but it is hard for two fighters to be accused of these things."

The diplomat talked at some length about Jean Musa, who had been described as a mysterious figure who did jobs for him definitely outside of the category of official embassy business. Henry-Haye said that Musa had been an American citizen for 22 years. He said he had known him in France and that when he came over here Musa volunteered to help him during his visits to New York.

Musa, he said, spoke both French and English fluently, and that he had been glad to accept his services as an acting secretary in New York. He denied that Musa had given him information concerning Free Frenchmen to be dispatched to Vichy. He denied also that Musa was a regular embassy employe. He said that all the money he had given to Musa had been merely to reimburse him for expenses, and that this had never exceeded $300 a month.

The Herald Tribune article said that the French Embassy was drawing about one million dollars a month from the estimated 250 million of French funds that had been frozen in the United States.

Ambassador Henry-Haye denied that any sums were spent for propaganda or spying. He said the sum availabe for the embassy was about $25,000 a month.

Taking up the Herald Tribune charge that advance plans of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's ill-fated Dakar expedition were smuggled into the United States for transmission to Vichy last August in a gasoline can, Ambassador Henry-Haye said this was a "thrilling story." But he called attention to the date—August, 1940.

"Ridiculous in Fact"

"I was not here then," he said. "I was in France. So, the story is ridiculous in fact. I never heard of any story of that kind."

The Ambassador was equally emphatic in knocking down a story which said that he schemed to erect a powerful radio station on St. Pierre, a French island off Canada. The fact was, the Ambassador said, that the Western Union Co., had sought permission to construct such a station, but had been denied permission by the French government.

He then turned to the story that agents of the Vichy government had sought blueprints of an improved Bren gun. He said that he had never heard of this gun, but that the embassy's military attache had told him it was known all over the world.

"Look at me," the Ambassador said, throwing wide his arms. "I am a spy. Mr. Talbert said so, and some radio commentators have repeated it."

He then emphatically denied the charges that the captains of French ships in the United States had been ordered to sabotage the vessels. Actually, he said, instructions had gone to the masters of these ships not to destroy them. These instructions were given, he said, so that no mistake could be made, and he announced that the instructions would now be repeated.

an increased effort to keep plants working on three shifts, with a step-up in second and third shift operations.

He roughly set as the work-spread goal in defense production about 60 per cent employment on the first shift, about 30 per cent on the second shift and the 10 per cent balance on the third shift. He said much study has been given to the three work-shift objectives and it has been largely a question of raw materials coming along fast enough.

A reporter asked if the President would amplify his Labor Day statement that "we must do our full part" in conquering "forces of insane violence" let loose by Adlof Hitler. He said the language in his speech spoke for itself.

The proposed setup in the national defense effort, both in money spent and products delivered, must be made for reasons of national safety, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Estimates for the new lend-lease program should be ready this weekend, he said, but he set no definite date for submission of the additional defense estimates. He said he had no idea whether the defense money would be askd for the current fiscal year or the next one, but indicated estimates would be prepared as fast as possible.

Of the original seven-billion-dollar lend-lease appropriation, he said nearly all of the funds have been allocated and orders have been placed for more than half the total. Orders obligating the balance will be made within the next 60 to 90 days, he said.

Petain Legion Already Has Branch in U. S.

By Ansel E. Talbert

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

The creation of Marshal Petain of an official instrument of Vichy's totalitarian "National Revolution" in the shape of the French Legion of War Veterans already has been duplicated in the United States.

The leader of the new French Legion in America is Col. Michel Minoux, who resigned two months ago from France Forever, the Free French group, giving as his reason disapproval of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's move into Syria with British forces.

Acting in close collaboration with Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador and apparently with advance information of Marshal Petain's plans, Col. Minoux has already set up the framework for his pro-Vichy French Legion for carrying on "liaison work" with French-speaking groups and others.

Call for Blind Obedience

Col. Minoux really got to work in earnest on July 23, when Henry-Haye wrote to him in New York from Washington that he was fully in accord with the legion's program. The first article calls for blind obedience to the Vichy government's present policies of collaboration with the Axis. Col. Minoux previously had shown the plans and articles of organization of his proposed French legion to Col. Georges Bertrand-Vigne, the war veteran who accompanied Henry-Haye to the United States and holds the position of counselor of the French Embassy.

Col. Bertrand-Vigne, just returned from a visit to Chicago and Detroit in furtherance of the Vichy propaganda network which the French Embassy has been attempting to create, wrote his full and unqualified approval of Col. Minoux's report.

With these encouragements, Col. Minoux immediately arranged a series of meetings with A. Musa, head of the Vichy clique in New York. Musa, who signs himself "Secretary to the French Ambassador" and accompanies the Ambassador to various parts of the country, has carried out a variety of jobs for the embassy, although, according to the State Department, he is not registered as a foreign agent.

Musa's jobs have included the collecting of information about the "acceptableness" to Vichy of Frenchmen living in the United States.

Mysterious German

It also has been disclosed that Musa attempted to become a party to a deal for bringing to the United States plans and blueprints for the improved Bren gun, mainstay of the British invasion defenses, although he just previously had arranged a series of meetings with Capt. Ugo d'Annunzio, a registered agent of Fascist Italy.

Musa and the ambassador were both acquainted with Ludwig Marcel Baron, a mysterious German national who on May 20 was sent to prison for four years "for impersonating an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation." Baron, also known as Mathews, had a record of underground activities in China, Belgium and many parts of Europe.

Col. Minoux, beside conferring with Musa, met Charles Roux, vice consul of France in New York, to discuss his French Legion plans. The main difficulty, it developed, was the matter of securing funds to finance it, for recruits were few, and the French Embassy was particularly afraid that any direct donations might be traced and result in the United States Treasury shutting off all "funds for diplomatic services."

Musa, who was introduced at all meetings to persons not already acquainted with him as an "intimate collaborator" of the French Ambassador, made the suggestion that any use of the embassy funds by the French Legion might be put under "traveling expenses," in any official list submitted. He also made it plain that he expected to have a separate section of the legion assigned to him and his "information services."

So far as meeting quarters were concerned, the group decided to depend on the generosity of Mrs. Seton Porter, of New York, who has been at the head of many movements in the past to give relief to French soldiers and the French nation. Mrs. Porter acted as a sponsor for Henry-Haye's "lecture tour" of New England last December.

Col. Minoux related in high elation that Mrs. Porter, who had not been told all the details about the French Legion, was prepared to give the group "a nice office." She even had offered to turn over the New York office of Secours Francaise, a relief group, if for any reason it was found necessary to close the relief work.

Despite the high patronage of the French Legion, it has failed to draw away many of the members of the long-established Federation of French War Veterans, which has a large and flourishing sectoin of active De Gaulle supporters.

American 'Tourists' Infiltrating Into Section Around Dakar, Paris Press Charges

By Ralph Heinzen

United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Sept. 2.—The Nazi-controlled Paris press alleged today that mysterious 'American tourists" are infiltrating into African territories, including the Dakar region, where British and "Free French" forces have been concentrating for threatened attacks.

The allegations were published simultaneous with disclosure that a high French naval officer, a member of one of France's oldest families, has been executed by a German firing squad in Paris as a "Free French" spy serving Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The officer, Count Honore Estienne D'Orves, formerly of the general staff of the French Mediterranean fleet, was executed Friday despite the intervention of French Vice Premier Admiral Darlan, whom he served as an aide during the 1936 London Naval Conference.

The newspaper Paris Soir warned of a grave menace to French West Africa because of what it called "a concentration of American tourists" in Liberia and Sierra Leon within striking distance of strategic French Dakar.

The Americans, it was claimed, are showing "more than normal curiosity" in the French Trans-Sahara Railroad which is under construction and the French desert trails linking North Africa and West Africa through Mauretania.

The "Free French" forces were said to be massing men and materials in and around Koufra Oasis in southern Libya, captured by the De Gaullists eight months ago after a 1,000-mile trek across the desert from Lake Chad, as well as around Mourzouch Oasis.

The Paris Soir said that the large De Gaullist concentrations in the southern Libyan desert must be linked with the massing of British imperial forces in northern Egypt, apparently in preparation for "united action against the Axis forces in North Africa."

The Free French forces in southern Libya were said by the Paris Soir to be testing newly arrived British and United States planes and tanks especially designed for desert warfare.

The De Gaullist forces for several months have dominated the entire southern half of Italian Libya.

The execution of Count D'Orves was disclosed by German military authorities, who said he had confessed to "espionage on behalf of England," and that therefore Darlan's efforts to save his life were in vain.

Strengthening measures to stamp out Communist, Free French and other opposition to Marshal Petain's regime and its course of "collaboration" with Germany, the government prepared today to carry out a shakeup in the national police.

Shipbuilders Stick To Jobs Like Heroes

Inspection of Yards Proves British Strain Every Sinew

By Craig Thompson

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 1.—The construction of ships of both fighting and cargo-carrying types is the third front in the battle of the Atlantic.

In Britain it is going on at a pace that is almost frenzied, but in the first two years of war British and Allied losses have out-stripped the capacity of shipyards.

Actual production figures are the admiralty's secret. Total losses for the two years are known to be in the neighborhood of 6,500,000 tons, and it is doubtful if replacements are anywhere near half that figure.

Even with prodigious help from the United States, it will be a long time before the handicap of losses can be overcome. But inspection of shipbuilding activities now going on here proves that every sinew is being strained to produce more and more.

Stick to Their Jobs

The heroism of the shipworkers who stick to their jobs through long hours, fatigue and blitz bombing equals the story of any of the more spectacular deeds of bravery in the fighting forces.

The scene in one of Britain's largest shipyards is suggestive. A police launch from which the inspection was made chugged down a sluggish stream.

Here in the row on one side of the river was a merchantman's keel being laid. In stocks next to it was the skeleton of a ship of the same size with her ribs in place. Next again was one that had about half her plates riveted on the frame, and next was one ready for launching. Nearby was one launched last week and being finished.

This was not just an isolated section of the water front. With the variety of ships—merchantmen, corvettes, destroyers, minelayers, tank-landing barges and others—the scene was repeated for miles along the river.

In the middle of the river the sounds of riveting on each bank reached a thunderous volume. Smoke from foundries and mills where ship parts were being fabricated hung over the whole scene. It was a scene of mass production of ships that surpassed, according to those who knew, the most herculean efforts of the World War.

Warped to piers were a number of ships undergoing minor or major repairs.

In theory each shipyard is an independent and competitive firm; actually all work together pooling supplies and labor in order that the most urgent need can be first supplied with either.

Work goes on all day and all night; under some conditions of aerial bombardment, its continuance imposes a strain on the workmen that cannot be estimated.

Went Home to Rubble

When the blitzes came, German bombers flew over and raked the Clydeside ship area night after night. They set a huge lumberyard fire at Clydebank that raged for several days, and during that time Nazi bombers concentrated on the area around the fire. For concentrated destruction there is hardly an area in Britain that resembles what was the site of the tenements of these shipyards workers.

Men finished with their jobs in the morning—even during such bombing as this the work went on where it could be done inside of hulls that were completely blacked out—and went home to find their homes turned into rubble and their families gone.

They had no way of knowing whether wives and children had been killed or had gone away hurriedly to safer areas. Moreover, they had no place to sleep and the canteens where food might be had were desperately crowded.

These men still found it possible to return to their jobs and do their work. Practically the entire resources of the communities were mobilized to provide transportation and locate lost families or find homes where the men could be billeted. Most men had to be housed miles away from the shipyards and transportation provided for them.

Some men who worked days got up at 5:30 a. m. to make buses that would bring them to the jobs by 8 o'clock. Breakfasts were hurried and inadequate and by the time they began the day's work they were hungry again. Managements would have been happy to provide them with hot substantial breakfasts, but the facilities were unobtainable.

Lunches the men brought were cold and inadequate, and at the end of a long day there was again the long ride home before they could get a hot dinner. Generally they got to bed no earlier than midnight, and then in quarters that were crowded and uncomfortable.

But through the long summer days ship after ship slid off the stocks.

Nearly every available workman has been making ships, so there have been few to repair or build houses. Conditions remain only slightly better than after the March blitz, and with the season of long nights again approaching the shipbuilders circumstances will become somewhat worse.

There is one great trouble, W. M. Bissel, president of the Confederation of Engineering and Shipbuilding Trade Unions in the Clyde district, "men will go on binges once in a while. Then they come to work with hangovers and are not very efficient and it slows things up. But I cannot say I blame them overmuch."

Roosevelt Flirts With Bolshevism, Berlin Asserts

Berlin, Sept. 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt's Labor Day speech was described by authorized German sources today as developing "nothing new whatever" as to foreign policy but revealing the American Executive from the domestic viewpoint "in the role of Kerensky."

These sources said Alexander Kerenski, Socialist leader who served as premier of Russia in 1917, tried to use bolshevism for his imperialistic plans, but had to learn that "bolshevism goes its own way."

Similarly, they said, "President Roosevelt is now flirting with bolshevism to use it for his ends."

These sources expressed the opinion there was a discrepancy in the Roosevelt address for, they said, on one hand he emphasized workers' rights in phrases directed to Moscow and, on the other hand, stressed principles such as religious freedom, "which bolshevism can never acknowledge."

They said he forget to mention "the most important freedom—the right to work."

Axis Plans 1 State, 1 Flag For All Europe

By the United Press

Rome, Sept. 2.—Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper asserted today that he and Adlof Hitler, in their five-day conference on the Russian front last week, decided on the unification of all Europe into one great Axis-dominated state fulfilling the dream of Napoleon.

The "European national flag" already has been created by Il Duce and the Fuehrer, containing the national colors of every nation on the continent, and has been unfurled beside the Axis flags at the Allied armies, it was stated.

The unification of Europe into one state after the "assured" Axis victory, answering the Anglo-United States declaration of postwar aims announced after the recent Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at sea, was described by Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Popolo D'Italia.

The article, written by Mario Appelius, said that all of Europe, in addition to the Axis-occupied nations and including Portugal and all of France, eventually will be brought into the new state envisaged by Hitler and Mussolini.

The announcement came as the Fascist press and authoritative spokesmen lashed out at President Roosevelt's Labor Day speech which was described as an attempt to "drag American workers into the war" by misrepresenting the Axis viewpoint toward labor's rights.

Mussolini's newspaper boasted that "from the Russian battlefield Mussolini and Hitler have launched the unification of Europe and the Axis thus clearly proclaims its peace aims—the elimination of Anglo-American exploitation and the Bolshevik menace from Europe."

It was stated that Finland, Slovakia, Croatia, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria already are actively lined up with the Axis and that the Greeks are "regaining their feet" with Italian help.

Portugal is destined for a place in the unified state as Europe's western bulwark and "in the new Europe there is a place for all peoples."

In an apparent bid to Turkey, the article stated:

"The new Europe guards the integrity of the Dardanelles and guarantees Turkey from any attack."

In a sterner note of warning it was stated that "it is now France's duty to assume her responsibility toward the continent in which she lives."

Nazis Reported Pressing Japan

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Sept. 2.—German advisers are pressing the Japanese government toward a policy of aggression on the Asiatic continent and defiance of the United States and Great Britain, reliable foreigners recently arrived from Japan said today.

They added the Nazis are bringing all pressure possible to force Japan into war.

These foreigners, including Axis nationals, asserted the Konoye government probably would have to choose between yielding to the extremist elements—notably the army—or face the possibility of overthrow by violence.

Moderates in Japan who wish to avoid war with the democracies are being intimidated, it was said. The recent attempt to assassinate Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, vice premier and minister without portfolio, was a deliberate warning to the moderates, the travelers said.

Baron Hiranuma, considered an outstanding moderate, began an investigation of Nazi penetration of Japanese government and industry when he was home minister in an earlier government, the travelers said.

News of the plot against Hiranuma leaked out prematurely, and on August 13, the night before he was shot, an Axis journalist telephoned police and asked whether Hiranuma was dead. This newspaperman has been under close police investigation since, according to the travelers.

The moderates are said to feel that Japan will run into catastrophic defeat if she challenges the United States, Britain and Russia.

Tokyo's population, described as virtually without air raid defenses, was said to be in near panic over the prospect of air attacks.

2 Out of 3 Fail in D. C. Bar Tests

Yesterday meant the end of a long and anxious wait for 982 persons who took the District bar examinations June 19, 20 and 21—a wait that ended in disappointment for nearly two-thirds of them.

The committee on admissions and grievances of the District Court announced that 381 had passed the tests, 601 had failed them.

However, a committee spokesman said, this was better than average. Ordinarily only about 35 per cent are successful. This time 39 per cent of the candidates made passing grades.

Many of those who failed will try again in next December's semi-annual tests.

Some of the "grads" are hopeful of getting into the law practice right away, while others are too relieved at the moment to do anything but thank their lucky stars.

Sadie B. Arbuthnot, 2124 I STreet Northwest, a stenographer at the Department of Justice, prepared for law at Southeastern University here, and admitted yesterday that to know she passed the bas examination gave her "a wonderful feeling."

Bennett Williams, jr., of Arlington, Va., who works in the farm security division of the Department of Agriculture commented that "he was really anxious to get into law." He studied for three and a half years at George Washington University.

A list of thos who passed appears on Page 24 of this morning's Post.

Pole Tells How Nation's Gold Was Saved in Refugee Trucks

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TELLS OF POLAND'S GOLD—Ignacy Matuczewski, former Polish minister of finance, and his wife are shown on arrival yesterday aboard the liner Excambion at Jersey City. He told of the removal of $75,000,000 of Poland's gold from the country when the Germans were at the gates of Warsaw

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Sept. 2.—Fifteen inconspicuous-looking trucks carried the entire gold reserve of Poland, totaling 75 million dollars, on a bizarre tour through Europe before depositing the precious metal in a temporary place of safety from the Nazis, Ignace Matuczewski, former Polish finance minister, disclosed here today.

Matuczewski, who arrived from Lisbon on the American export liner Excambion, told how he and Henryk-Floyar Rajchman, Polish minister of industry and commerce, had assembled the trucks in Warsaw at a time when the Germans were at the gates of the city in September, 1939, and loaded the gold, weighing 75 tons, abroad.

From Poland the trucks began their strange journey, going as far afield as Rumania, Turkey and Syria. The gold was then shipped to France where it was unloaded and turned over to the Polish government in exile at Angers, he related.

Refugee women and children sat atop the trucks during part of the journey in order to divert suspicion, Matuczewski said.

After the invasion of France was begun by the Nazis, the gold was again moved. Matuczewski did not comment on the present location of the metal.

Bus Strike Ends in North; Police Charge Defense Plant Pickets

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Sept. 2.—The strike of 900 drivers and other employes of Northland Greyhound Lines, Inc., which had tied up bus operations in eight Northwest States since early Sunday, was settled tonight.

Full service on all lines will be resumed Wednesday, W. J. Kay, president of the company, announced.

Under the settlement, reached after two days of conferences, two arbiters will be named within five days to determine whether a pension plan the company has put into effect shall be continued. The strike resulted after the plan was placed in effect and the members of Local 1150 of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, A. F. L., claimed the plan was properly a wage and working condition and therefore a subject for bargaining.

Should the two arbiters fail to reach agreement, a third arbiter will be named within 15 days to work with the original two.

Los Angeles, Sept. 2 (AP).—Six persons were hurt today in street fighting that broke out as police hurled tear bombs into 500 pickets stationed in front of the Cannon Electrical Co.

The plant produces cable connectors and other electrical appliances for airplane factories. It has national defense contracts.

"If this plant has to shut down, every major aircraft company in America will be paralyzed," President James H. Cannon said.

The tear gas bombs succeeded in dispersing the picket line temporarily. Company officials, asking police aid, claimed that workers attempting to pass through the gates were intimidated and jostled by the pickets.

Later, five men were arrested for violation of the city's antipicketing ordinance.

Union Asks Mediation

Warren, Ohio, Sept. 2 (AP).—An attorney for the C. I. O. Utility Workers Organizing Committee said today a strike called for tomorrow night at the local generating plant of the Ohio Public Service Co. probably could be averted if the National Defense Mediation Board should intervene.

Albert F. Galusha, counsel for Union Local 177, said he expected the board to send a mediator here.

Strike Vote Being Counted

Chicago, Sept. 2 (AP).—Tabulators in the hotel headquarters of 19 railroad labor organizations counted the ballots today of some 1,200,000 members who have voted on whether to authorize a strike on the Nation's major carrier systems.

Decision to take a strike vote was reached August 5 by leaders of 5 operating and 14 nonoperating brotherhoods after the conference committee of the railroad managements rejected the unions' demand for wage increases.

Brotherhood officials said it was not yet definite when the counts would be finished and announced it appeared likely it would be by next Friday.

Gypsum Tieup Ends

Oakfield, N. Y., Sept. 2. (AP).—Striking C. I. O. employes of the U. S. Gypsum Co.'s Oakland plant returned to work today, ending a walkout which began more than two months ago.

Herman Clott, field representative of District 50, United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.) asserted the strikers returned under a "truce agreement" reached in accordance with a National Defense Mediation Board recommendation. About 500 are employed at the plant.

Stockyard Strike Averted

Kansas City, Sept. 2. (AP).—A strike of 200 workers at the Kansas City stockyards, scheduled for tomorrow, was called off after a two-hour conference today between C. I. O. negotiators and stockyards officials.

Senate Takes Up Tax Bill Today

provisions withdrawing the right of married taxpayers in these States to divide income for Federal tax purposes.

LaFollette, one of the original exponents of base-broadening, opposed lowered exemptions unless steeper excess profits, estate and gift and other increased levies recommended by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau were approved.

The base-broadening provision appeared to be heading into unexpectedly heavy floor opposition. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, reserved the right to oppose the lower exemptions.

"Worst in History"

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, another committeeman, told reporters he would support the bill because of the urgent need of revenue for defense but thought it "the worst tax bill in history."

He said the bill "cuts exemptions to the bone, and then cuts into the bone," adding that the proposed $5 use tax on automobiles alone would reach 35 million car owners.

The bill lowers exemptions to $750 for single persons and $1,500 for married and for the first time imposes surtaxes (starting at 6 per cent) on the first dollar of taxable income. A wide range of new excises on luxuries, mechanical conveniences and amusements are imposed. Corporate surtaxes are stepped up and excess profits rates boosted, though taxpayers are given the option between average earnings and invested capital methods of computing their tax. Estate and gift taxes are increased, but not to the point recommended by the Treasury.

Provision facing the closest Senate test is the amendment withdrawing community property Federal tax advantages now enjoyed by Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada and Washington. Under community property law, property is jointly owned by husband and wife and income can be divided between them for Federal tax purposes.

Connally charged last night in his minority report that advocates of the amendment were using it as an entering wedge toward reviving and adopting the House-defeated mandatory joint return proposal. He charged the amendment flouts long standing Constitutional and statutory rules of the eight States affected, and is itself unconstitutional.

Husband Only Owns Half

Husbands in the eight States, he said, will be forced to report as their own all of the community partnership income, "when as a matter of law and fact the husband owns only one-half, and is merely the managing partner of his wife's half."

Urging that instead of penalizing the community property system, Congress should encourage its spread, Connally said it ought to be the law everywhere "that the wife is entitled to something more than food, clothing and a place to sleep."

"This proposal to single out the citizens of community property States to compel them alone to pay tax on income belonging to their respective spouses is certainly violative of due process under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution," he said.

He charged the committee's action was "ill-considered and hasty" and was taken "without hearing the facts and law involved."

Walsh Urges Curbs On Prices and Profits

Clinton, Mass., Sept. 2 (AP).—Rising costs, heavier taxation, unemployment in non-defense industries and possible inflation were foreseen tonight by United States Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, as he urged curbs on war profits and a limitation of prices.

Asserting the pending tax bill had "not adequately dealt with" measures to prevent profiteering in defense, Walsh said:

"One way to gain this end is to limit by contract the permissible profit. . . . Another way is through the limitation of prices."

THE DANCING BRIDE. Lotus visitors at the Monday luncheon session witnessed the prettiest spectacle of the year—love walked right in. For following their wedding at St. Matthew's, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Borchek went directly to their wedding breakfast at the Lotus. All of the wedding party was present from the pretty bridesmaids in filmy pink and blue bonnets to the tiny flower girl in a quaint Kate Greenaway frock. But the big moment arrived when the bride and bridegroom stepped out in a waltz. They were given the floor all to themselves and evoked more applause than a star revue act. Some one shouted to the serious young bridegroom, "Why don't you smile?" He said, "I'm too nervous!" . . . Singer Buddy Shaner will return to the Lotus next Monday. And in top form after many weeks of vacationing.

DON CARPER, who will lead his rhythm group in bright music at the Cafe Caprice opening tonight

"To the Troika" will be the words heard most often by taxi drivers tomorrow evening. This ever-delightful spot reopens tomorrow with a truly brilliant revue, stressing the Pan-American theme. Valencia's rumba unit and Sasha Lukas' Orchestra.

ELECTRIC INTERLUDES—LITERALLY. There's a dynamic quality to the interludes played in the Rainbow Room by Maestro Milton Davis and Melvin Henderson. And, naturally, because Milton plays the novachord which derives its harmonies from 1500 tiny radio tubes, and Melvin plays the electric guitar. There's a peculair resonance and sparklike quality to this electric music. This rare combination of instruments is head only in the Rainbow Room.

WHIRL GOES BOOM! Those graceful but daredevil dancers, Martin and La Marr, are not remaining at Casino Royal this week as expected. In the midst of one of their dificult whirls La Marr incurred a badly sprained ankle. This should make some people realize the risk inherent in the spins of the ballroom dance acts that look so effortless. Another crack dance act was booked in promptly and balancing acrobat Lou Kearns also has joined the revue.

LOVE AND LADY VINE. We said goodby to Lady Vine on the Starlight Roof before it closed, but when we dropped into the Madrillon next afternoon—there she was, and feeling a bit qualmish. It was the twelfth anniversary of her marriage, you see, and her divorced husband had called up with good wishes. But it was only a friendly conversation. For Lady is now engaged to Maurice Ansel, French industrialist with large paper mill interests. The trouble is that Maurice can't leave France and Lady can't go over there.

Don Lopez and his Continentals have just opened at Hi Hat for a limited engagement of two weeks. They come direct from New York. Jimmy Summerville and his Four M's are vacationing in Atlantic City, will return to Hi Hat on Septeber 15.

"AU 'VOIR BUT NO GOODBY" is the phrase to say to Paul Kain and his boys in Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom between now and Saturday midnight when they close for the season. For Paul's band will be playing over WJSV all fall and winter. And after a couple weeks' rest Paul will open with a bright unit in a prominent downtown spot on September 22. Besides, we hear on good authority, that the Kain Band will be back at Glen Echo next year.

TROUBLE! TROUBLE! Diversionists at Restaurant "823" recently had a session of woe, thought the customers never suspected. Oscar Heintze had a toothesche, Brother Gustav had hay fever, Jane Marlow had a headache and Van Taylor had laryngitis (which meant that he sang bass instead of barytone). But they're all chipper as grasshoppers again.

DIETING AND THE RADIO. It was a choice gathering in the King Cole Room—Owner Vin Gallagher, Arch MacDonald of the radio, singers Eve Knight and Angie Rodante who both warble over the air waves. Eve and Angie both opined that they dare to eat a bite for hours before going on the air. Hefty Arch said, "I eat all the time, regardless of broadcasts. In fact, I eat every chance I get." But here Vin Gallagher archly tossed in the thought, "With your voice, Arch, a burp or two probably just adds to the effect."

This seems to be "Reception Week" for Matt Windsor and Eileen George at the Anchor Room. Their admirers have been dropping by pairs, quartets and dozens to hail their return to town.

..DANCING VS. DRAMA. Norma Roman, dancing on the Shoreham Terrace this week, was formerly a dramatic actress, played all over Europe, before she decided that dancing, for her, was a better medium of expression. Norma was born in Egypt, speaks many languages, specializes in Moorish and Spanish gitana dances.

A big change is coming at Nightingale in a couple of weeks. Rodd Raffell and his band will become a traveling orchestra, specializing in college engagements. Glenn Miller is mentioned as their sponsor. More about this later.

MAYFLOWER RETURN—AND DEPARTURE. Greeter Teddy has returned to the Mayflower Lounge from his Florida vacation. Johnny, who's been subbing ever so smartly for Teddy, had planned a New England vacation. He may get up there, but if he does, it'll be in uniform.

MELODY OF A LIVELINESS. "Don't Let Julia Fool You," the tricksome tune that seems more playful than ever when Ida Clark does it in the Lounge Riviera . . . "Rumba, No. 1," a honey played exclusively by Mayfair's Senators. It was composed by the Senators' pianist, Bill Harrington . . . The dizzy ululations of Durward Bowersox' violin in the Plymouth. Give Durward any number and he'll trim it up with a hundred thrills and frills . . . The "Hut-Sut Song" becomes almost symphonic when Bert Bernath and his Pall Mall Room orchestra give it the "beauty treatment" that they apply to all numbers . . . Those dozens of "V for Victory" lyrics warbled every Tuesday in the Neptune Room by Don Baker's Musicomics. They'll warm the cockles of your heart.

THE HUNTERS LODGE, a grand new Virginia spot, is making hundreds of friends. One visit and you're a Hunters' Lodge fan. Dance music is by Ernie Sparks and his band, a group of rhythm experts who are "in the groove" every second. Songstress Margaret Osterwald knows her modern music, too, and is mighty pretty which doesn't hurt a mite. Chicken dinners are the food specialty. Hunters' Lodge is on Route 211, 3 miles west of Camp Washington.

RIVER BEND has dozens of advantages for amusement seekers. So it's naturally one of the most popular of suburban spots. You get to it by driving down scenically beautiful Mount Vernon Boulevard (where trucks are forbidden). George Stein's band is adept at both the newest rhythms and the Viennese waltzes so much in demand. The chicken dinners are both delicious and very generous in quantity. There's your design for a perfect evening.

City Union Bargaining Held Illegal

Collective bargaining agreements between a city government and a union of its employes "would be an unlawful and unauthorized delegation of public power to the union, a private organization, over which there is no public control", according to a report published today by the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, with headquarters at 730 Jackson place Northwest.

This conclusion is one of several based on a survey by Charles S. Rhyne, executive director of the Institute, in which he studied opinions of State Attorneys General, court decisions, and individual reports furnished by 385 city attorneys.

"The recent strike in Detroit and the threatened strike in New York City's transit system have focused national attention on public employe unions," the institute said. Among its conclusions were these:

No city has ever signed a collective bargaining agreement with a labor union representing city employes similar to the agreements entered into between private industry and labor unions.

Legal opinions of the courts, city attorneys and State attorneys general are unanimous in their decisions that cities do not have the power to sign collective bargaining agreements with labor unions representing municipal employes.

By taking away municipal control over its employes, such agreements would, in effect, vest control of the municipal government in an unelected and uncontrolled private organization (the union) and take control from the head or heads of the municipal government who have been chosen by the public and whose conduct is regulated by law.

The declared public policy of the Federal, State and municipal governments, as was so well expressed by the President of the United States, is opposed to collective bargaining agreements in public employment.

Federal legislation providing for collective bargaining for private industry employes expressly provides that the legislation does not apply to cities and their employes.

City employes have no right to strike to enforce collective bargaining agreements with the city.

Skeptical Industrialists Hold Hopes for Defense Setup

have not, in the opinion of the Nation's industrialists, been doing the job that Baruch's War Industries Board did in the World War. So far as SPAB is concerned—well, they are withholding judgment.

THE INDUSTRIALISTS go out of their way to praise the "spirit of service" that motivates the men working in Washington, many at a great personal sacrifice. But having granted that, they reiterate that the 1941 defense setup is far from a ball of fire.

It is true, they say, that the United States is producing more today than it was in 1917-1918. But the answer to that, they explain, is that America's industrial capacity is far greater now than it was in those days.

"When we reach our peak," said one man, "Germany and the territory she has conquered won't be able to produce within 35 per cent of us. We are very far from our peak right now."

Here are some other statements made to reporters of The Washington Post by industrialists in different parts of the country:

Steel manufacturer—"Those fellows in Washington are too much interested in dazzling the public with figures on what is to come. They seem to be more interested in advertising what they expect to do, and in the political repercussions from their forecasts, than they are in actual accomplishments.

"The whole of industrial America should be looked upon as a single plant. Then a comprehensive plan should be worked out and agreed upon. That is a fundamental necessity.

"YOU SIMPLY must have a plan. No practical operator can design a plant, acquire his raw materials, sign up skilled workers and schedule a program until he knows what the production demands are going to be.

"The trouble so far is that there has been no plan. The theorists are constantly changing and shifting their plans. Today they will establish a base. Tomorrow that base simply becomes a new point of departure.

"The result is that the industrialist never knows where he stands. He would like to feel that he is in some particular place in the general scheme of things, but he discovers that he is always going some place. He will be just setting down to production in one plant when Washington will throw four or five new plants at him. The result is a dilution of his organization's energy and skill, when what is needed above all is a concentration of energy and skill.

"That is what I mean when I talk about the need of a plan. To the industrialist much of what is going on in Washington looks more like political planning than industrial planning."

Machine-tool manufacturer—"I am not surprised that they got a bad start down in Washington. I suppose that was inevitable in view of the nature of the Roosevelt Administration. The New Dealers simply did not know anything about production. Oh, they knew a lot about plowing under and about ever-normal granaries, yes, but they did not know anything about production.

"ALL THAT INDUSTRY ever got from them was abuse. However, there is no sense in brooding over that now. The main thing is to get the stuff out.

"In my opinion, the President is trying to do entirely too much now. What he ought to do is to pass the reins to somebody, tell him what is needed in the way of planes, tanks and other weapons, and then turn his own thoughts to foreign affairs and the welfare of the Nation.

"I have reached the point where I dread a visit to Washington. It is discouraging, disgusting.

"To get anything done in OPM you have to fight your way through a maze of legal barbwire. All those fellows down there seem to be scared. They make so many changes that I have had to assign a man to a full-time job of keeping track of the changes. And then there are the letters we get from OPM. They are so complicated, so confounded legalistic, that we have to call in our general counsel every time to tell us what they mean.

"Why can't we waive some of this nonsense and get down to the job of turning out the stuff?"

They Put in A Good Word For Knudsen

The industrialists for the most part had a good word to say for William S. Knudsen. They liked him as a man and admired him as a production expert. They wondered, though, if he wasn't too much in awe of President Roosevelt.

Baruch, the steel manufacturer recalled, told President Wilson frankly that he couldn't do the job as chairman of the War Industries Board unless he was given the necessary authority.

IN DIAGNOSING what was wrong with the defense program, the industrialists, as was noted in yesterday's article, insisted that something would have to be done about the labor problem.

They recalled that in 1918 the Labor Conference Board laid down two principles which, while they may not have been wholly observed, did much to prevent labor strife.

These were:

"1. In establishments where the union shop exists the same shall continue and the union standards as to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment shall be maintained.

"2. In establishments where union and nonunion men and women now work together, and the employer meets only with employes or representatives engaged in said establishments, the continuance of such condition shall not be deemed a grievance . . ."

AN INDUSTRIAL engineer in the Midwest told The Post that it was inevitable that labor in the United States would come to have a greater voice in the councils of industry. Despite a popular notion to the contrary, he said, American industrialists for the most part were not in the least disturbed by this prospect—provided that labor in this country becomes as responsible as it has in Great Britain.

"After all," he said, "what is industry but capital and labor? That has long been recognized in England. But over there they settle their problems with a certain amount of dignity and with an understanding regard for each other's interests.

"Over there labor has achieved its presents status by evolution. Over here it seems we are trying to achieve it by revolution. It is all too precipitate, too violent. That would be bad enough in the happiest of times, but to have it happening now when the country is in danger seems to me a serious reflection both on labor and on its good friend, President Roosevelt."

Tahiti Blocks Attempted Coup

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 2 (AP).—News reaching here today said Vichy sympathizers in the Tahiti government failed recently in an attempt to seize control from the De Gaulle Free French, who assumed the rule of that South Pacific island last spring.

The reports said the Free French Governor General Richard Brunot arrested a number of citizens, who probably will be deported, and freed De Gaullists who had been imprisoned by a local governor. The majority of the population supports the Free French movement, which is in control in all the French Pacific islands.

2 Americans Among 10 Killed in Ferry Plane Crash in Britain

fice, in Washington; Dr. Robert B. Mowat, of Bristol, attached to the British library of information; E. Taylor, of Farnborough, Hampshire, England, principal technical officer of the British air ministry; Col. L. H. Wrangham, of the imperial army, and the following crewmen:

Capt. Kenneth Garden, of Sydney, Australia; First Officer Geoffrey L. Panes, of Tonbridge, Kent, England, and Radio Officer Samuel Walter Sydenham, of Edmonton, Alberta.

Two westbound ferry planes crashed in England August 10 and 14, killing 44 persons, including 18 Americans. An eastbound plane crashed in Newfoundland in February, killing 3 persons, including Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin.

5 Men in Crash Known in Capital

Five men, known in Washington, were speeding important war missions by flying to England, when they met death in the crash of an R. A. F. ferry bomber in Britain, it was learned here yesterday. They were:

Count Guy de Baillet-Latour, a representative of the Belgian government in London, whose marriage here to Miss Marianna Dunn, daughter of James Clement

COUNT GUY

Dunn, adviser on political relations for the State Department, was an outstanding event of Washington's 1936 social season.

Capt. Sherwood Picking, 51-year-old native of Baltimore, who had had several tours of duty here and who was en route to London to be assistant American Naval Attache there, according to the Navy Department.

Lieut. Col. Lewis Wrangham, of the Royal Marines, British veteran of the first World War, and for several months an adviser to the British Supply Council here, according to the British Press Service here.

E. Taylor, of Farnborough, Hampshire, England, British aviation expert, who had been in this country for about a year on duty with the British Air Commission with headquarters in Washington.

Dr. Mark Benjamin, of Middlesex, England, who left Washington last week, after working here three weeks on a special mission with the Central Scientific Office of the British Supply Council.

A sixth passenger, also reported killed along with the plane's four crew members, was Prof. R. Mowat, English historian and former professor at the University of Wisconsin, who had been in the United States as a visiting professor at several American colleges under a Carnegie Institute plan.

Count de Baillet-Latour, according to the Belgian Embassy here, was in Washington from August 15 to August 20, on a special mission for the Belgian Minister of Colonies in London, for whom the count was an assistant.

Neither the Belgian Embassy nor the office of Dunn would say whether he had met his wife during his visit to this country. Countess de Baillet-Latour was said to have been with her parents at their summer home in Marion, Mass., for the past month.

Miss Dunn and the Count were married in St. Matthew's Church April 30, 1936, before a gathering of diplomats, and representatives of Washington's official and society groups. Following their wedding trip, the couple went to live in Brussells, Belgium.

A spokesman for the Belgian Embassy said that Count de Baillet-Latour had been in Washington for a few weeks in the fall of 1939 and that the Countess had been in this country since then, while her husband had been on duty in London most of the time. At the time of the Nazi invasion of Belgium, Count de Baillet-Latour was working with the Belgian economic mission to London, and since then had been with the Colonial Minister.

He flew to this country on his last trip, and following his stay in Washington spent some time in New York, according to the embassy spokesman.

Capt. Picking, son of Rear Admiral Henry Forry Picking, was born at Baltimore February 21, 1890, and was appointed to the Naval Academy by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1907. As a world war submarine commander, he was awarded the Navy Cross for "distinguished and heroic action" during patrol and convoy duty in waters "infested" with enemy was vessels.

During various Post-war shore assignment, he commanded the aeronautical test laboratory in the Washington Navy Yard, and served in the Bureau of Ordnance here. He had commanded the submarine base at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, for two years when he was assigned to London August 13. His residence was in Portland, Me.

Lieut. Col. Wrangham received the military cross for his World War services for England, and was called from retirement for his assignment to the Supply Council here, the British Press Service said.

Taylor came to this country from the Royal Aircraft Establishment in Farnborough, and had been engaged in various technical investigations for the British Air Commission. His latest assignment before starting back to Farnborough had been to tour American aircraft factories on the West Coast, it was said here.

Dr. Benjamin, in his forties, was sent to Washington by the British ministry of supply on a special mission, whose nature was not disclosed by a spokesman for the Central Scientific Office of the British Supply Council. He had completed his job here last week, and left Washington for Montreal. He was connected with the British General Electric Co.

September-r-r Means Oysters And Reporter Eats His Story

"R" MONTHS RETURN—John "Jack" Dempsey, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, gets an oyster from Dorothy Winters, waitress in the Interior Department cafeteria. This is an "r" month, you know, and the bivalves are in season the rest of the year

"You are invited to attend a meeting of the Oyster Institute of North America," wrote the Department of the Interior. So a reporter from The Post went to the cafeteria there yesterday noon, armed with pencil and paper to cover the oyster meeting.

It was to be a celebration of the official opening of the 1941 oyster season. (September has an "r" in it, y' know.)

The reporter arrived there promptly, was admitted after presentation of his press card, and that's all. People stood around smiling at him. "How do you do," they said. "How do you do," he replied. And then somebody passed him a plate of oysters.

Anxious to get a story, he gulped down six of them, and then sought the host. But they beat him to it. They passed him another half dozen, plus a cup of coffee. Again he indulged.

"What time is the meeting?" he asked finally.

"There is no meeting," was the reply. "There's just this gathering."

The reported was resigned to his fate. Not one to hide behind a social shell, he joined the "how-do-you-do" conversants. He had some coffee, then some oysters, some crackers, then some oysters, a sandwich, an oyster.

In all, it was a very jolly day.

Gov. Maybank Leading in S. C. Race for Senate

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 3 (AP).—Gov. Burnet R. Maybank piled up a big lead over his two opponents for the U. S. Senate in a special Democratic primary today but on the face of incomplete returns he lacked the majority which would give him the nomination. Each of the three candidates pledged full support of the Roosevelt Administration.

With 1364 of the State's 1523 precincts reported, the vote was: Gov. Burnet R. Maybank, 56,975; former Gov. Olin D. Johnston, 38,636; Representative Joseph R. Bryson, 34,166.

The second primary, if necessary, will be held two weeks from today. The election, a mere formality in this overwhelmingly Democratic State, is set for September 30.

The winner will take over the Senate seat about October 15, replacing Roger C. Peace, Greenville publisher now serving by appointment of Maybank, and will serve out the unexpired term of Associate Justice James F. Byrnes, who was elevated to the Supreme Court two months ago. The term expires in January, 1943.

Irate Citizens Ready to Shoot Stunting Plane

Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville, Md., had 36 calls in five minutes yesterday from citizens of Mount Rainier and Brentwood who complained that an airplane was stunting a few hundred feet over their homes.

Police said a number of irate citizens were up on their roofs with rifles and shotguns ready for battle when officers arrived.

According to Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the county police, witnesses said the plane was apparently an Army trainer. Police believe the plane came from one of several airports in nearby Maryland. A check of these fields is being made by police.

WOODWARD SCHOOL For Boys

(Accredited)

You owe it to your boy to give him every school advantage.

If he hasn't been making all the progress you think he should—don't blame the boy altogether. All personalities cannot be fitted into a stereotyped mold. Chances are he is "forward" in some subjects but "backward" in some others. Mass education does not take this variation into account.

Here's where the Woodward School is a big help. With small classes and men teachers your boy gets the extra, individual attention he needs. You want him to have—and he will—receive a full-rounded education—and that's what we aim successfully to give him. You'll be gratified at the progress he will make under our guidance.

Woodward School offers this specialized service for boys—up to and including high school.

Fall Semester Begins September 22nd

We'll be glad to have you consider WOODWARD SCHOOL for the enrollment of your boy this fall. If convenient, drop in and see the Director. If you prefer, we will send a faculty representative to see you at your convenience. Phone National 8250.

Hopeful Record

Good fortune was probably mingled with good management in the prevention of traffic fatalities in the District over the Labor Day weekend. Unhappily Washington was not free from accidents. A 90-year-old woman was seriously injured in front of the British Embassy and ten other persons were hurt in Washington and vicinity. Also a victim of a previous traffic crash in the District died on Monday. Yet the toll of life chargeable to reckless use of the automobile is so great that this restricted list of personal tragedies during a period of exceptionally heavy traffic seems hopeful by comparison.

Certainly Washington fared better than the Nation as a whole. Virginia, with 16 accidental deaths during the holidays, more than offset the creditable record of the neighboring District. In the entire Nation between 400 and 500 lives were sacrificed to the American mania for speed and irresponsibility on the highways during this holiday period. More than 200 others perished by some violent means, including 73 who went swimming without taking reasonable precautions. By and large the record shows that we are an extremely reckless people who as individuals still have much to learn about our own protection.

However, the excellent showing made by the District is worthy of note as evidence that much still remains to be done by local authorities. Our record, established when a vast number of visitors were thronging the city, suggests how the loss of life from holiday activities can be greatly reduced. For this demonstration we must thank the relentless probing of automobile accidents by Inspector Miller and his aides and the application of the lessons they learned.

Japan's Safety Zone

The Japanese gift of imitativeness is as marked in politics as in any sphere of activity. For instance, the "East Asia Coprosperity Sphere" grew out of a claim to exercise a Monroe Doctrine of the Far East. Now Japanese publicists are experimenting with a "safety zone" around Japan. The purpose is to prevent the shipment of gasoline and other essentials from the United States to Soviet Russia via the Japan Sea and Vladivostok. The alleged justification for this action, of course, would be that Japan would only be doing in her adjacent waters what was done at the outbreak of the war in Europe by the 21 republics of this hemisphere.

The parallel, however, would only be verbal, not actual. The so-called "safety zone" established in the North and South Altantic was not the isolated action of one nation, but the joint policy of all the nations of this hemisphere. For the parallel to be accurate the establishment of a similar zone in the Western Pacific would need the consent of Russia, China and other nations with frontage on that ocean. What is more important, the American "safety zone" was never designed to shut off trade between the American republics and any other nations, including belligerents. Yet that is precisely what the Japanese want done so far as trade between the United States and Russia is concerned. Lastly, the establishment of the American safety zone followed a proclamation of neutrality by each of the 21 republics. Japan, an ally of the Third Reich and cosignatory with the Soviet Union of a treaty of nonaggression, has not issued any proclamation of neutrality in the war between Germany and Russia. And, even if she had done so, that would not give the island empire any right to interfere with American commerce. An attempt to do so, in fact, is certain to meet with drastic reprisals by the United States.

Last week the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Nomura, sought an interview with President Roosevelt in which he delivered to the latter a message from Premier Prince Konoye. That action suggested that Japan was eager to regain the good will of the United States which the island empire had dissipated as a result of a long succession of high-handed and barbarous measures directed both against China and against our interests in the Far East. But no detente in Japanese-American relations is possible unless and until there is a radical change of heart in Japan. Unfortunately, there is no evidence of such a change. The belligerent statement made Sunday by an army spokesman who accused the United States and Great Britain of "unpardonable crimes" and demanded speedy action to create the "greater East Asia coprosperity sphere" and the clamor of the powerful Asia Development Federation, which is headed by a former premier, that the government prevent the shipment of supplies "to nations hostile to our Axis powers" suggest that the jingoes are still very much in the saddle in Tokyo.

One can only conclude from these developments either that the efforts at a rapprochement being made by Prince Konoye and Admiral Nomura represent the views of only a small group in Japan or that these efforts are only a smoke screen to hide Japan's actual plans.

Confusion Of Roles

The Administration must soon decide whether it will make a practice of seizing defense plants when employers refuse to fire organized workers who fail to pay their union dues. In the case of the Kearny, N. J., plant of the Federal Shipbuilding Drydock Co., a precedent for such action was set. To what extent will that precedent be followed? The answer to this question is even more important than the future relationship between the Government and the employes of the Kearny plant.

Chairman Davis of the National Defense Mediation Board has laid down the rule that "the emergency should not be used either to build up or tear down unions." That policy, so far as it goes, is basically sound. But its application by the board has left that agency in an untenable position. The board recommended a maintenance-of-membership clause in the Kearny case because it believed that the existence of the union was threatened by a great influx of new workers under a two-year agreement involving surrender of the right to strike. That fear appears to have been exaggerated. But in any event the board's action to protect the union against a potential threat had the effect of depriving the employer of his business organization in order to avert a potential threat to another.

The basic fallacy in the board's reasoning lies in the assumption that the Government should step in to protect a specific organization against internal decay. Congress has guaranteed to workers the right of collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing. But it has not given any particular union of either the A. F. of L. or C. I. O. an indefinite charter to serve as the bargaining agent for any group of employes. The answer to the board is, of course, that any organization which cannot continue to serve the interests of a changing group of employes ought to give way to one that can. It is a far cry from the spirit of the National Labor Relations Act to prevent the resignation of employes from unions which do not satisfactorily represent them.

Some unions are struggling desperately to free themselves from the grip of racketeers and Communists who have beguiled their way to places of leadership. The union-maintenance clause, enforced by the Government, would be the best possible means of preserving their power to exploit the rank and file. Indeed, the most important safety valve in the labor movement is the unrestricted right of workers to leave an organization that no longer adequately represents them. That right is the essence of democratic unionism. Certainly it ought to be carefully safeguarded by the Government, except where employes and employers voluntarily agree to suspend it.

So the role of the Government in dealing with this momentous question ought to be thoughtfully redefined. It doesn't make sense for the NDMB to tell an employer that he must discharge employes who fail to pay union dues while the NLRB tells him that he must not interfere in any way with the rights of his employes to organize as they choose. The responsibility of the Government is to safeguard the collective bargaining process and, particularly in this critical period, to assist in the settlement of disputes which threaten to interrupt production. Maintenance of union membership is not an obligation upon either the Government or employers. It is a task for the unions themselves. And for the sake of developing responsible unions as well as sound industrial relations, the task should be left solely in their hands.

Vichy In America

There could not have been a dementi more categorical than the denials which Mr. Henri-Haye gave to his press conference yesterday on the reports that he has been abusing his diplomatic privileges. It is good to have his assurances. The newspaper reports to which he addressed himself were accompanied by photostat copies of correspondence which purported to show that the Embassy and its agents have been indulging in espionage and worse. So far the story, it is true, has been rather thin, and the French Ambassador explained away whatever content there seemed to be in it. Some of the denials may be attested from other sources. For instance, the Ambassador said that the French government, not the Western Union, dropped a project for a new line of communications between France and St. Pierre which, allegedly, was to be used for secret messages.

In the course of the Ambassador's explanation he made several statements which are useful for the record. Fresh instructions have been issued that there shall be not the slightest sabotage in the French boats at present in American ports. There is no spy organization either in the Embassy or elsewhere maintained by the French government. No check is kept on the activities of Frenchmen in this country. Not even a report is made to Vichy on what non-Vichy Frenchmen are doing as those doings are recorded in the American press.

It was a field day for the Ambassador. But his wonderment that, in view of his quarter of a century in Franco-American relations, suspicions should surround his mission will not be taken seriously. After all, his government has become more and more enmeshed in the Hitlerism to which our national policy is opposed almost to the point of war. Our ideals are at odds with his. And our major preoccupation at this time, in our own security, must be to see that the Nazis and their French collaborators do not Nazify an area in which we now have a lively concern, namely, North Africa. It so happens, indeed, that the Free French, not Vichy, are on our side of the international fence. Thus, if this country must be on the alert about Vichy, it must equally be on the alert about any of Vichy's representatives. This can be said without in any way throwing any doubt upon the Ambassador's dementi.

Air Ferry

For military reasons transatlantic flights of the R. A. F. ferry command are conducted under conditions of the utmost secrecy. Arrivals either in England or Canada are sometimes announced if passenger lists include prominent officials. But departures are naturally not publicized, and information which would give any inkling of how many flights take place is suppressed. Only when the ferry command announces plane disasters are we reminded that transatlantic hops are proceeding week after week as a matter of routine. In the last three weeks, however, the ferry command has had to report three disasters which have taken a toll of 54 lives. Two of the crashes occurred last month just as the planes were taking off from England for Canada. The most recent, a bomber, which took off from Canada for England on Labor Day, was reported missing, and later found wrecked.

The loss of the planes is, of course, regrettable, but it is insignificant compared with the lives sacrificed. For among the 54 have been Army, Navy and defense officials, including 20 Americans, some of whose services will be sadly missed on both sides of the Atlantic. While the proportion of disasters to total flights made is undoubtedly minute, it is the disasters which stick in the public mind. And for this there is no help. Britain, of course, considers ferry command losses as war casualties. It is not a pleasant thought but we, too, must regard such losses in a similar light. For our own officials who fly with the ferry command are subject to the same hazards as the British, and in the great majority of cases are traveling on war or defense matters.

Peace In Iran

Fighting in Iran has ended in four days. Britons and Russians will thus be spared the kind of guerrilla campaign which proved so wasteful and annoying to the British in Iraq. The advantages are substantial. The "blitz" was so successful that there was no sabotage either of the oil wells or of the trans-Iranian railway. British-Russian allies have closed the door to a German drive in the direction of the Persian Gulf, and have assured themselves of the vital oil supplies of Iran. They have opened a door through which supplies can reach Russia. Finally, the occupation of Iran will mean the cutting off of one of the major sources of oil that has been open to the Japanese.

The circumstance that Germany had to stand by helplessly while this occupation took place will hardly help Hitler's prestige in the Near and Middle East. How badly the Nazis feel about it is shown indirectly in the lame effort made by the German press to portray the occupation of Iran as a British "retreat" made necessary by the Axis domination of the East Mediterranean sector. Of course, this is the very reverse of the truth. The occupation of Iran, far from representing a weakening of British strength in the Near East, means that the British, with Iraq and Syria in their hands, feel strong enough to broaden their base of operations in what may ultimately prove a vital theater of the war.

GO, SUMMER DAY

The green perch comes to the float.
Neither drawer nor hewer,
It is not his accounting to note
Fishers are fewer.
Under the light-stilled water
With quiet eye
He is part of the night-filled country.
The kingfisher's cry
Echoes no longer. Later
From the marshy deep
The moon comes, smoky and worn.
Shadows creep.
Owls are hunting the hills.
Go, Summer day.
The fishermen, young and armed,
Have other prey.

Army Personnel

Too great credit cannot be given The Post in its work of showing actuality in munitions production as compared with "official statements." A number of the latter recall those celebrated World War twins: "Hooey and Blah." The sky over the German lines was no more filled with American planes in 1918 than is the Army today capable of fighting a sustained action: The present day uniformed land forces of the United States are not seasoned to warfare, disciplined even for maneuvers, nor adequately equipped. In antitank and antiaircraft guns there are a number of "samples" only.

Indicative of military thoroughness is the announcement of a new model of armored vehicles to be put into production before the requirements for such vehicles have yet been met. As the designers of our combat cars have had very little experience in designing warworthy machines, can it be that the present models are inadequate? Or are we going to build something exclusively American, as was done in 1917-1918 in the "class B" trucks, motorcycles, etc.?

Where we might not have experienced personnel for the design of combat cars, ordnance or other munitions, we have in some measure trained leaders and technicians available. Many of these are (or were) in the organized reserves. But, it appears to be a standard and hallowed practice in the Regular Army that few reserve officers of or above the grade of major shall be given any command; so that the overwhelming majority now in active service are captains and lieutenants. The years of civil training and military experience of senior reserve officers are thrown away, by either not calling them up for active duty; or by rejecting them for some minor physical defect, pes planus being the favorite—we used to know it as flat feet in 1918. And some totally inexperienced Regular subaltern is given the post and corresponding field rank. The Regular Army must be preserved, come what may.

The rather too many occasions when parts of a column of troops lose their way on the public highways en route to or during maneuvers recall the jibe about the extension-course trained officers who could not locate themselves near El Paso, because there was no Gettysburg on their maps.

This country is not in a state of war yet, but the Army repair shops are getting cluttered with disabled vehicles, the result of speed-mania, undisciplined driving and ignorance of the requirements of personnel in operating motor vehicles. The faults lie in the senior officers of commands, who, of course, are Regulars.

Girls' Responsibility

I think you were on sound grounds in reminding the public that it has a responsibility in this day of crime. We must realize that there is always a proportion of abnormal, perverted people around. We must remember that crime is fomented by the kind of news that is now the reading public's staple. And we must bear in mind that Washington as a boom city is exposed to all the conditions of boom cities. It has always been amazing to me, as it was to Mrs. Roosevelt, that so many girls seem to "take a chance" with men with whom they are not well acquainted—from accepting lifts in cars to accepting invitations to drink in their apartments. The news of late, coupled with your editorial admonition, may put them on their guard.

Tuberculosis Tests

The failure of our military authorities to X-ray for tuberculosis every man in the service has created a situation which cries out for immediate correction.

One of the most short-sighted policies the Federal Government can pursue, from either the financial or the humanitarian viewpoint, is the toleration of this deadly and highly communicable disease in its Army and Navy.

There are now over 1,500,000 men in the Army and over 700,000 in the Navy; only a small fraction of these have received chest X-ray examinations for tuberculosis. On the basis of past studies there must be at least 10,000 undiscovered cases of this disease among these men, spraying germs to others.

On the average, every veteran of the last war who developed tuberculosis cost the Government more than $10,000. There is no legitimate excuse now, as there was 20-odd years ago, for the presence of any active or chronic cases of tuberculosis in our armed forces. There is adequate equipment throughout the Nation for X-raying every man in the military service, yet the Government has not utilized the existing facilities.

Our boys are not called to military service to be exposed to the dangers of tuberculosis. To take no adequate steps to eliminate these thousands of cases now in the service and to continue to mix healthy recruits with these infected men is a travesty on medical preparedness.

Democratic Leader

If the course of democracy is to survive the ordeal through which it is now passing, it is time a leader imbued with the ideals of democracy be chosen at once to guide the battle-scarred and threatened members of those countries who have been or will be drenched in blood, out of the chaotic state into which they have been driven by the mad dog aggressors.

In my belief there is no man on earth more capably fit for such a task than the honored President of your United States and I am of the honest opinion that this conviction is shared by all who at heart have freedom of thought and the right to live as free people. Their one objective is to straighten out this awful mess the world has gotten into—of course, Nazis, their allies and isolationists would not be expected to indorse this movement.

It should be well to remember that the mad dogs of Naziism are not particular who they bite—even though they be isolationists.

The Norm

I should like to remind Mr. Pegler that the normal, which he so adores, and which he declares that he himself is, is a conception, an idea, sometimes an ideal of the human mind, but never a reality, never constant, a simple arbitrary convenience. Everything, including the irrepressible Mr. Pegler, varies from the normal, and should those extreme variations, which he so abhors, be destroyed by his eloquence, presto, the normal would change its position, and your columnist would find himself shivering on the outer reaches of that orbit to whose center he now sees himself so cozily clinging.

De Facto Maps

The cartographic science of America, as represented in the newspapers, does grievous injury to the interests of justice and inadvertently promotes the lawless pretensions of Germany by attributing to the Reich in war maps territories claimed to be "annexed" by the aggressor, and by unintentionally recognizing the conveniently formed pseudo states, which are only ephemeral fictions, as if legitimately created.

Nothing is better established in the law of nations than the absolute rule that title to no conquests can be acquired by a combatant during a war, this being possible only in the definitive peace, by which the permanent results of the war are determined.

With the exception of Abyssinia, in which the recognized scion of an immemorial dynasty is restored to the throne, from which he was ejected by a predatory act of Italy, the de jure frontiers of the warring lands are precisely what they were at the beginning of the conflict, the boundaries now indicated in the maps are de facto only, and to limn them in consonance with the claims of Germany is prejudicial to the universal public interest.

Since the United States ceased to be neutral, our position as a quasi-combatant vitiates our previous tacit recognition of Germany's partitioning of Czecho-Slovakia, and places us with England in respect of Poland, which, in law, continues to exist as an independent nation.

Cession of territory to Russia by Finland is not a contradiction of the invariable practice for the reason that title was acquired by treaty at the end of hostilities in a separate war.

The law governing the subject is fully recognized by the American courts. In a dispute arising from the capture and occupation by the British of the island of Santa Cruz in England's war with Denmark, our courts decreed that the British possessed only the rights of military possession, and that the title of proprietor could be acquired only by the conditions of the peace. The laws of war permitted such enemy territory to be administered by the British and devoted to their prosecution of hostilities, however denied any pretense of annexation.

Hitchhiking Soldiers

Mr. James R. Frazer, in a letter to The Post a few days ago, expressed amazement and indignation over what he felt to be the selfishness of motorists who pass ride-thumbing soldiers on the highways without offering a lift.

I am one of those who pass all hitch-hikers with as much speed as the law and circumstances will permit, and I would say that Mr. Frazer and we differ only in experience, knowledge, sense of values, and attitude toward the advice and admonitions of police officials—not in generosity of spirit.

Police records are filled with cases in which motorists have been robbed, slugged, kidnaped, murdered, and otherwise made to suffer for their well-intended but unwise compliance with the requests of hitch-hikers disguised as soldiers, clergymen, college boys, tired old men, and so on. So great has the menace become that some States have enacted laws prohibiting either hitchhiking or the carrying of hitchhikers.

Within my own acquaintance several motorists have suffered greatly from their tender-heartedness with respect to hitchhikers. One lost his life savings, about $10,000, and spent months of time in litigation, the result of court action by a stranger who, given a lift by my friend, was injured by a fragment thrown off a passing truck. My friend's family had to suffer for it.

The Post Impressionist

Jacks Or Better

It happened on board the Alaska, early in 1883, when that crack ship of the Guion Line established a new Transatlantic record, six days and 14 hours, Southampton to Sandy Hook. After paying my passage, following a year in Switzerland, I found myself dead broke and wondering what would happen in New York. This fact is mentioned because it accounts for my not having held a hand in the poker game of which there is a story to tell.

But before telling it, a sequel to the personal affair may prove of interest to others caught in the same predicament, that is, being broke and no friend in sight. The day before the journey's end I invested my last dollar in the ship's pool on the run. Lady Luck smiled and I went ashore with $250, and the world was my oyster once more.

That poker game, to which I might have been admitted despite my youth, opened with six players. Names have slipped from the memory cell; details have not. One of the men at the green cloth-covered table was a titled Britisher, designated for the time being as Lord Haverhill. Another was a cotton broker from New Orleans, say a Mr. Gerald Pincer, quite wealthy by all accounts.

Table stakes, no limit, was agreed upon, and money of the players was placed in pockets similar to those on a pool table, only smaller, pockets intended to prevent coins and bills escaping whenever the liner lurched.

The Englishman lost steadily from the start and most of his losses went to the Southerner. Then jacks or better became the order, and when no one held openers for three times around the pot in the center assumed considerable size.

"I'll crack it," finally said a Boston merchant.

Lord Haverhill placed his cards on the table, faces down. "I would like to play but have no money in sight," he said. "What say to my putting this up as a marker?" He took a coin from a vest pocket. "This gold piece is worth several thousand dollars," he declared.

The others agreed to suspend the table-stakes' rule and play was resumed. At that moment the captain decided to swing ship, to correct a compass error, and the liner, falling into a trough, careened with a lurch that caused three players to capsize and money of all description scattered over the floor. When equilibrium had been restored all hands groped for the fleeting cash which they endeavored to classify as to ownership.

Lord Haverhill was the last to arise from a kneeling posture. His face was flushed and his voice choked with a nervous, apologetic laugh. "It's not down there," he announced. "Has anybody seen the sovereign I put up as a marker?"

No one had, and all hands joined in a further search of the smoking-room floor and the deck outside. The efforts proved fruitless and, the situation assuming an ugly look, the man from Boston suggested a search of clothing, and suiting action to the word, he removed his coat and vest, placing them on the table, then turned his trousers pockets inside out.

Notwithstanding a mild protest by the Britisher others did likewise until it became the turn of Gerald Pincer. He stood near the doorway, a tall man, arrow-straight, whose face had paled; but there was no tremor in his voice when he said, "I resent such an indignity. The gentleman's coin is not in my possession, and that is all I have to say."

He turned and walked aft to his cabin, where he remained until New York was sighted. A deck steward who served him reported that most of the food he carried on a tray was left untouched.

Naturally all that had happened was noised about, doubtless with exaggerations, and a hovering shadow mocked any attempt at joviality such as usually marks an ocean passage.

There was a young woman on board, a handsome blonde, with whom the Southerner had promenaded the first day out. Report had it that they were to become man and wife. The version of the episode related to her caused the fair passenger to remain secluded in her stateroom.

The Alaska's captain declared that he would report the affair to the harbor police, notwithstanding the Englishman's statement that he would not prosecute. "Let the blighter get away with it," was all he said.

We were grouped forward, watching the Statue of Liberty emerge from a mist when attention was called to Lord Haverhill, who, partly clad, was hurrying along the deck carrying a shoe under an arm. "I say, chaps," he called out, "I have found that sovereign!"

He added to our amazement by pointing to the sole of what he termed an old boot which he had worn to ease a corn, then had put to one side.

"My man saw the yellow piece when he was placing my luggage. When I stooped down in the smoking room I probably scraped my foot along the floor and the coin was pushed between folds in the broken sole. Will you please find that Southern gentleman, so that I may apologize."

We felt it necessary to do the same, but two of us who went for Gerald Pincer found it difficult to say much after being admitted to his cabin. The man's appearance staggered us. He was haggard; he had aged; it was evident that he had slept but little, if at all.

Grudgingly he accompanied us to where a small crowd now surrounded the Englishman, who pushed persons one side when he saw us approach; then he seized an unwilling hand, which he held while repeating what he had told us. "In heaven's name, sir," he concluded, "why did you act as you did?"

Gerald Pincer did not reply immediately. Finally he spoke loudly, that all might hear: "My hobby is the collection of rare coins. When that sovereign was placed on the table I was about to say that I recognized it, but the accident and what followed prevented. Anything I might have said after that, and what a search would have revealed, could only have made me out a felon.

"Two such coins as that were minted. An error was discovered in the die and it was destroyed. I purchased one of them for $5000. Here it is!"

The Japanese Blow Hot And Cold

NOVER

WINTER arrives early in Siberia. It is now only a matter of weeks before that vast region which stretches across the Eurasian land mass from the Urals to the Pacific is covered with snow and ice, the temperature in certain places falling to depths not to be experienced anywhere on earth, including the poles.

The Japanese have reason to know what a Siberia winter is like. They had sent an expeditionary force into that region in 1918. The troops had been kept there for four years in what proved the vain hope of capitalizing the turmoil and confusion which then prevailed in Siberia in order to make Japan master of the territory east of Lake Baikal. All Japan got for her pains then was a long casualty list, a whopping national debt and minor oil concessions in northern Sakhalin.

GERMANY'S attack on the Soviet Union provided the Japanese with what looked like a golden opportunity to settle accounts with her northern neighbor. The fact that Japan and Russia had only recently signed a nonaggression pact was, to be sure, a psychological barrier to aggressive action by Japan against the Soviet Union but hardly one to tie Tokyo's hands for long.

A more important obstacle was the fact that from Vladivostok to the major Japanese industrial centers is not more than 700 miles, which is well within the range of modern bombers. Understandably, therefore, the Japanese made no move against Siberia when Japan's ally, Germany, launched her attack on Russia.

More than ten weeks have since elapsed, but that German victory which was to serve as the signal for a concerted Japanese drive into Siberia has not materialized. Now winter is approaching. In the meantime, Japanese trade is being strangled as the result of the action of the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands in freezing Japanese funds. Almost as the crowning blow, American supplies, including high-octane gasoline which Japan herself has been barred from getting, are moving across the Pacific to Vladivostok.

THESE DEVELOPMENTS have produced two opposing currents of opinion in Japan. One group believes that the time has come for Japan to sever the link with the Axis and seek a rapprochement with the democratic powers. The other group is convinced that the present situation calls for drastic and immediate action. Thus while, on the one hand, the Konoye government has officially approached the United States with the view of carrying on discussion of the questions at issue between the two nations, spokesmen of the army are urging a policy of force.

One such spokesman, Col. Hayto Mabuchi, chief of the Japanese army press section of Imperial Headquarters, has denounced the United States and Great Britain for their "unpardonable crimes" and declared that Japan must forcibly break the iron ring of economic pressures with which those nations, China and the Netherlands were strangling her. "If the sources of materials in foreign countries are closed to us, "the day will come when we will be at the end of our domestic resources." Japan, he added, would be inviting danger "in delaying action to break the encirclement."

More recently, the Asia Development Federation which is headed by a former premier, Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, passed a resolution demanding that Japan remain allied to the Axis and stop shipments of American oil to Russia by way of Vladivostok.

Who speaks for Japan, Prince Konoye or Gen. Hayashi, Admiral Nomura or Col. Mabuchi? The answer is that they all do and that the difference between these seemingly opposing groups are by no means as great as appears on the surface.

IN A STATEMENT already quoted, Col. Mabushi did not oppose a Japanese-American settlement through diplomatic means. If a peaceful way out is found, he said, it will be a matter of congratulation not only for Japan but for the world. What he did not say but what is implicit in his remarks is that the only kind of a negotiated peace that would meet the approval of the powerful group for which he speaks would have to be a peace on Japan's terms. And that, with minor and unimportant differences, is precisely the viewpoint of the seemingly more moderate and less belligerent element in Japan as well.

The latter realize that the fire-eaters in Tokyo refused to do what Japan is up against. They know that the area of maneuver she once had has been reduced to the vanishing point; that her resources have been sapped by four years of fruitless war in China; that she is no match for the coalition of powers now aligned against her. But they are not strong enough to turn back the clock and force a retreat by Japan to the path she was pursuing in the period between the Washington conference and the Mukden incident of September, 1931. Yet that is the only basis on which a peace satisfactory to China, the United States and Great Britain can be achieved.

In his Labor Day address, in which no mention was made to Japan, President Roosevelt declared:

"When in any war your enemy seems to be making slower progress than he did the year before, that is the very moment to strike with redoubled force, to throw more energy into the job of defeating him, to end for all the time the menace of world conquest and thereby end all talk or thought of any peace founded on a compromise with evil itself."

This is a good thought to keep in mind in considering our relations with Japan no less than in determining our course of action with reference to Germany.

The Gallup Poll

By American Institute of Public Opinion

Majority Still Favors Convoys

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 2.—Public sentiment for using the American Navy to convoy ships going to Britain has declined slightly in the past six weeks, but a small majority of voters continue to be in favor of an American convoy system. This fact is revealed by a Nation-wide survey of public opinion by the Institute.

The decline in convoy sentiment has taken place during a period when the Nazi-Soviet war has shifted attention away from the Battle of the Atlantic and when British shipping losses have been sharply reduced.

The trend of opinion on the convoy issue follows:

"Do you think the American Navy should be used to convoy ships carrying war materials to Britain?"

	Yes	No	No Opinion
April	41%	50%	9%
May	52	41	7
June	55	38	7
July	56	35	9
Today	52	39	9

Coincidental with the decline in convoy sentiments there has been a slight decline in the number of voters who favor all-out American participation in the European war. Whereas 21 per cent of the voters interviewed by the Institute in June, before the Nazi invasion of Russia, were in favor of going to war, the most recent survey showed only 17 per cent for war.

The decline in the vote for war and for convoys follows a pattern noted in many institute surveys, which is that interventionist sentiment in the United States tends to decline when Nazi war pressure on Britain slackens and to rise when Britain faces an acute crisis.

The highest vote for war in this country came just after the British forces were defeated in Greece and in Crete.

Carrozzo's Income Tax

TODAY I give you another chapter in the unfinished story of a selfless servant of the humble toiler who obtained an international charter as well as a whole sheaf, or deck, of local charters in the American Federation of Labor, acquired a racing stable and died about a year ago under bond for $275,000 to the United States Government to secure an income tax deficiency and the pertinent penalties and interest amounting in all to $250,000.

Mrs. Julie Carrozzo, the widow of Mike Carrozzo and administratrix of the estate of that consecrated leader of the humble white-wings, garbage handlers and pavement workers in Chicago, has carried the income tax case to the Board of Tax Appeals, where it is now pending. This legal action breaks the seal of confidence which normally protects the intimacies of the tax return except in case of obstreperous citizens who oppose the politics of President Roosevelt and find themselves singled out, individually, for punishment. By carrying her case to the Board of Tax Appeals, Mrs. Carrozzo has made available to the press as public documents all the data which the Treasury Department has collected.

THIS MATERIAL shows that Mike reported a net of $50,681 for the year 1937 and $51,585 for 1938, thus admitting net income of approximately $100 a week for each of those years derived from the union racket, and that, as an afterthought he admitted and paid the tax on an additional $52,000 net for 1837 which increased his admitted net income for that year to $102,681, or a little less than $2000 a week. On May 28 of this year, Mrs. Carrozzo paid $163,306, but under protest, toward the deficiency and penalties of $250,000 claimed by the Treasury and the pending proceeding before the Board of Tax Appeals in Chicago includes a demand for the refund of this amount on the ground that it was not legally due. Among the deductions which Carrozzo listed were losses incurred in the maintenance of his racing stable.

It is the government's claim that Mike Carrozzo, whose earliest recorded address in Chicago was down on the old Twenty-second Street line or levee where he was bodyguard and talent scout for Mike Colosimo, the first man to apply chain store methods to the brothel business, had net income of $199,473 in 1937 and $193,371 in 1938. This would have been a total of $392,845 for the two years or a net of about $3777 a week but of course we are not to assume that the old wrangler derived all his loot out of the actual wages of the subjects who were delivered into his power by the American Federation of Labor and thus placed at his disposal in looting the city. On the contrary, Mike, like his old colleague, Willie Bioff of the movie trades, used his union for bargaining purposes on his own behalf. He kept ready-mix concrete out of Chicago, refusing to let his men handle the stuff and thus robbed the people of the economies which they might have enjoyed and he had an interest in a paving compound which was used instead of ready-mix concrete. In that respect, his method was like that of Umbrella Mike Boyles, the crooked boss of the Chicago electricians who embargoed the wares of certain manufacturers of electrical goods and thus was able to throw a good deal of business to a rival company in which he was a stockholder.

Mike Carrozzo was a crook of such notorious character that even in the careless and undiscriminating naturalization court he received two warnings that his application for citizenship would be denied on the ground of moral turpitude and all-around verminous character. The story of how he finally got by and received the precious right of American citizenship is one that I have never had time to run down but it interests me and perhaps one day I will have it in shape for telling.

HIS parent union was the International Hod-Carriers and common laborers which has 250,000 members in many locals scattered around the country and which collects, mostly by extortion, from these ill-paid, horny-handed unfortunates a total of about 18 million dollars a year. Chicago was always a bad place in this international's total realm because from the earliest days of organization among the laborers there the union was a mob or gang concession and interference from the international was heartily repulsed. Finally, after years, the old president, Dominick D'Allesandro, died, and the new president, Joseph V. Moreschi, was selected from the Chicago field in 1926. He is remarkable in that he was actually a working laborer in his early days but his reign also refrained from interfering with Carrozzo with results that are now available for study in the files of the board of tax appeals.

It is of interest that neither William Green, Moreschi nor any other man in the entire leadership of the so-called labor movement, better to be described as the union racket, ever smelled the smell of Mike Carrozzo's batch of crooked unions or raised a finger to kick him out or otherwise protect the toiler from extortion and exploitation by this veteran rogue.

U. S. War Attitudes

By Mark Sullivan

Material And Naval Aid To Britain

ON the second anniversary of the day the war in Europe began, President Roosevelt, in a speech, uttered these words: ". . . we shall do everything in our power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces." These words, of course, are not to be interpreted as a literal promise. But the President's statement makes it appropriate to consider the past evolution of American thought about the war, and our likely attitude from now on.

SULLIVAN

A survey of successive changes in American thought about the war should begin some nine months before the war. In January, 1939, the presence of a French military officer in a plane that crashed in California revealed that American manufacturers were making planes for France and England, which these countries wanted in anticipation of possible war. To say these plane contracts were "revealed" is correct. When the news got out, and when it became known also that these contracts for American planes were made with the President's knowledge—indeed, that he had facilitated them—there was outcry from Congress and public. Mr. Roosevelt had almost the manner of a person detected in something culpable.

That was America's attitude nine months before the war began. When it did begin, in September, 1939, America's attitude remained much the same. A special session of Congress passed a rigid neutrality law—forbidding American ships to go into any war zone, forbidding American citizens or corporations to lend money or extend credit to a belligerent nation, forbidding any sale of any kind of American goods to a belligerent nation unless the belligerent nation paid cash, and carried the goods away from our shores in its own ships. This law was enacted in November, 1939. We were still in a mood of rigid leaning-over-backward neutrality.

DURING the first nine months of the war, the quiet period when it was called a "phoney" war, nothing happened to suggest any change in the popular American attitude. Some Government officials and Army and Navy officers, in a completely legitimate way, gave some slight and quiet help to the Allies. Manufacturers making planes on orders from the American Army and Navy, were permitted to deliver these planes to Britain and France—in effect this was merely giving priority to Allied orders over American orders. Some war material in the possession of our Army and Navy, classified as obsolete, perhaps by a strained construction of the word, were sold direct to the French and British. All this was done without much public knowledge. When Congress learned of it, Congress acted as if in disapproval.

THE first real change in America's popular attitude came in May and June, 1940, with the Nazi conquest of France, its imminent threat to Britain. President Roosevelt, with much public support, told the French government that we would send them supplies if they would remain in the war. In answer to appeals from Britain, we arranged for transfer of 50 American destroyers to the British navy, the arrangement being completed in August, 1940. We set about an enormous enlargement of our Navy. We set about enactment of a draft law, completed in September, 1940.

Still later, last winter, President Roosevelt proposed aid for Britain in the form of an immense "lease-lend" project, the transfer of billions of dollars worth of war material to the British, upon terms which did not much matter—in practical effect it might be lease or lend or gift. This was enacted last March. From our rigid neutrality in 1939, the lease-lend bill of 1941 was a long way.

THROUGHOUT all this, our successive steps toward help for Britain coincided with periods during which Britain seemed hard-pressed. Whenever Britain seemed safe, there was less disposition to become stirred up about helping her. This may be in part due to our overwhelming sympathy for Britain, in part to a self-interested conviction that if Britain went down we might be imperiled. Which was the motive, or how much of each, does not matter.

About the present American mood, a tenable estimate might say that Congress and the country are overwhelmingly willing to give more and more help to Britain—in the form of war materials. A proposal, probably soon, to increase the amount of lease-lend aid would meet with approval. It is likely both Congress and the country would approve, or certainly not set up intense objection, to full use of our Navy in aid of Britain. But Congress and the country continue, as they always have been, strongly averse to our sending an army to fight in Europe. To suppose that, or give the impression that, America may send an army to Europe, now or within the foreseeable future, runs risk of creating later disillusion.

Two Ferry Terminals Nearer To Brazil Than Is Dakar

Britain's West African ports of Bathurst and Freetown, mentioned as likely terminals of transatlantic ferry service for American-made war planes, are even closer to the eastern hump of South America than the French African outpost of Dakar, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"It is about 1820 air miles northeast across the Atlantic from Natal, Brazil, to Freetown, the capital and chief city of Sierra Leone," the bulletin explains. "Bathurst, capital of Gambia, Britain's oldest colony in Africa, is only slightly farther, while it is 1870 miles from Natal to Dakar.

Typical Colonial City

"Until the present war began in September, 1939, Bathurst was a station on a German commercial air line between Natal and Berlin. It has accommodations for both land and sea planes; the smooth waters of the natural harbor are readily accessible for either planes or steamships.

"Situated 100 miles south of Dakar on an island near the mouth of the Gambia River, Bathurst is a typical British colonial city of 10,000. Sun-helmeted policemen direct leisurely traffic on the well-ordered streets, which are flanked by waving palm trees. Not only the government buildings, but the little houses of the African natives are neat and freshly painted. Cricket grounds bring a reminder of home to British colonial officers on duty in the tropics.

"Back from the flat, green shores of the river stretches a narrow belt of tropical forest where some mahogany and rubber are produced. Gambia's principal exports, however, are peanuts and palm kernels. Until Dakar's fairly recent growth into an important shipping center, products of French Senegal, which surrounds tiny Gambia, also were shipped from Bathurst.

Base for British Fleet

"Freetown, 400 miles southeast of Bathurst, has been the principal base of the British fleet in West African waters. Since it is regarded as the best natural port on Africa's Atlantic coast, the city is a logical spot for a refueling and supply station. It lies on the shore of a broad estuary of the Rokel River, with the bungalows of some of its 65,000 residents extending up a succession of wooded hills.

"A broadcasting station has become of vital importance since the war began. Running to the interior is a narrow gauge railroad which brings palm oil, ginger, cotton and other native products for export. Gold and diamonds also are found in the interior; Sierra Leone's diamond mines have yielded as high as $3,500,000 a year.

"The colony and protectorate of Sierra Leone is an indirect outgrowth of the American Revolution. During that war the British recruited Negro slaves of American Tories to serve in the Royal army and navy. Afterward they were liberated in Sierra Leone. Their descendants still form a sizable group in Freetown."

$1,500,000 Fire Destroys U.S.Grain

Port Costa, Calif., Sept. 2 (AP).—A waterfront fire today caused an estimated loss of more than $1,500,000, including about $850,000 worth of Government-owned wheat.

One man was burned severely and two others were reported missing. The fire destroyed a big wheat warehouse, two fish reduction plants, an old whaling ship, seven cars of wheat, and two tank cars of fish oil, a barge and a tugboat.

Cleric Off to Britain Has Note to Churchill

New York, Sept. 2.—Bound for England to examine the war situation and the need of American aid, the Rev. J. Frank Norris, of Fort Worth, Tex., and Detroit, Mich., carrying letters to Prime Minister Churchill from Secretary of State Hull and Wendell L. Willkie, was among the 11 transatlantic passengers aboard Pan American Airways' Atlantic clipper which took off from LaGuardia Field this morning.

Exploratory Talks

By Ernest Lindley

Japan's Weakening Position

PRINCE KONOYE'S personal message to the President set forth no proposals, according to high officials. Couched in general terms, it reasserted that Japan's intentions are peaceful, expressed the hope that a major conflict in the Pacific can be averted, and denied that the Japanese "co-prosperity sphere" would discriminate commercially against the Western powers.

LINDLEY

What this gesture signifies remains to be established. The conversations going on with the Japanese are purely exploratory.

The Japanese may be feeling their way toward an honest understanding with us. They may merely be trying to find out how much farther they can go without getting into a major war. They may be trying to recover a greater freedom of choice by inducing the Western powers to loosen the economic noose around the Japanese neck. None of these possibilities is ruled out by well-informed officials.

ONE IMPOPTANT FACT is obvious: The bargaining position of the Japanese is slowly but steadily weakening. They are bogged down in China. On the west, south and east they face a condition whose strength is gaining. Any further aggression to the south or east means war with the Western powers. In the north is Russia, now an ally of Great Britain. Meanwhile, the economic pressure applied by the Western nations is squeezing Japan and ultimately will strangle her.

The bargaining power of Japan could be vastly improved by several conceivable developments. One is the collapse of Russia, which now seems improbable. Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's mouthpiece, reports that Hitler and Mussolini have decided to push no farther than the Ural Mountains this fall. Whether they can get that far is open to grave doubt. Even so, they concede Siberia to the Russians, and as long as there is a loyal Russian regime in Siberia aided by Great Britain and the United States, the Japanese position is not improved.

The expulsion of British forces from the Mediterranean and Middle East, giving the Axis access to the Indian Ocean, would boost Japan's stock. But, thanks to the Russian campaign, the British have been able greatly to strengthen and reinforce their position in the Middle East.

A third possibility helpful to Japan is that the Nazis, by more successful attacks on the north Atlantic shipping lanes or by a thrust toward South America via West Africa, will compel us to transfer more of our Navy to the Atlantic.

ALL THESE are only possibilities, and some are improbabilities. And every day the Japanese wait to see what happens, their own strength is being sapped.

Three main courses are open to them. One is to make war now—the course favored by the hot-headed militarists and those who believe the Nazis will win the war—(but treat the Japs better than they have treated their other allies).

The second is to attempt to reach a general settlement. This would spring from the realization that the Nazis are doomed to ultimate defeat, and that the bargaining power of Japan is now greater than it is likely to be again.

THE THIRD is to buy time to see what happens: which is worth while only if the economic noose is untied so that waiting does not drain away Japanese strength.

We do not seek war with Japan. Our officials constantly have held open to Japan honorable and far more profitable alternatives to collaboration with the Axis and the establishment of a "new order in Asia" by force of arms. But they know that the Japanese are in a terrible predicament and are not inclined to relieve it except in return for concrete manifestations of a sharp reorientation of Japanese policy.

The First-Run Houses Will Not Be, Next Week

Unprecedented Situation Prevails Midtown; New Plays Added to Subscription Season; News Notes and Gossip of Amusements

OF ALL THINGS! It hasn't happened before within the memory of those still living. Or thereabouts.

That is to say that if an eye were to be bent upon what the trade calls the "midweek notices" appearing somewhere around here, there would be discovered a strong implication that not a single, new, first-run film will be showing on the downtown screens next week.

MICKEY ROONEY

For the first time in its history, so far as can be dug out of tenacious memories and managerial boasts, Loew's Capitol Theater will be holding over its feature picture for a second week. That would be "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," latest release in the series that started out to be "B" subjects and have evolved into triple-A box-office attractions, thanks to the waggish miming of Master Mickey Rooney, the kindly paternalism of Lewis S. Stone, the motherly concern of Fay Holden and the youthful contributions of the youngsters in, and allied with, the Hardy family. From practically nowhere, the Hardy films have come along through the years to shatter a long standing house precedent. There will be a new stage bill at the Capitol next week, to be sure, but the Rooney still will be battling the bounteous charms of Patricia Dane on the screen.

There is a strong likelihood, too, that "Dive Bomber" will be swooping up and down—mostly down—the screen at the Earle for a second semester. "Dr. Jekyll" will be anything but hiding at the Palace and "Citizen Kane's" avariciousness will continue to drag in the hard money at RKO-Keith's at popular prices. A change of bill at the Metropolitan, but only to make way for the reappearance of Robert Montgomery in "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," who can't wait any longer for a downtown reincarnation. That goes also for "Shepherd of the Hills," at the Columbia and for "Intermezzo," extending its revival into a third week, at the Little.

It is a most extraordinary situation. Some of these soaring cinemas must have been better than we thought. And we thought most of them were pretty good, at that.

While not completely ignoring the international situation, the next issue of "The March of Time" will stay within the boundaries of the United States—within the boundaries of the biggest State in the United States, as a matter of fact. "Thumbs Up, Texas" is the title of the new release. Emphasis, of course, will be placed on Texas' role in the national defense program.

And Still They Come

In addition to Helen Hayes in Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Candle in the Wind," scheduled for the National Theater, October 6, as the first Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription play of the season, two new committments to the subscription list have just been announced. They are the two smash hits of last season on Broadway—"Arsenic and Old Lace" and Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," with only a shade of tentativeness attached to the latter. There are still three plays to be chosen for the Guild's bargain-counter series of six, but it is a reasonable surety that they will hold high the standard lifted by the three already selected.

That young Oriental barytone, Sharma, already known to Washington audiences through his appearance at Loew's Capitol Theater and other popular local engagements, is gradually creeping up on a career before the motion picture cameras. Sharma's vocal activities over the radio have led to a declaration on the part of Marvin Schenck, head man of the M-G-M talent-scouting forces, that a recent audtion proved this handsome young East Indian to be a real "find." Sharma's kennel of dogs on his 150-acre Maryland estate can testify to his enthusiasm over the gelatins. Among the several dozen pooches roaming his fields are those bearing such names as Sonja Henie, Charles Boyer, Sylvia Sidney, Simone Simon, Buddy Rogers, Judy Canova, Rudy Vallee, Marlene Dietrich, Fifi D'Orsay and Ginger Rogers. It is more his high yodels than his kiyoodles, however, that eventually will get him up there.

More Jobs for Actors

As part of the tuning-up exercises for the season of 1941-42, the Pierce Hall Players will hold open tryouts for parts in "Petticoat Fever" on Monday night, September 8, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest. Candidates also will be considered for roles in later productions. "The Male Animal" will be the season's second . . . And Edgar Kloten, named permanent director of the Blackfriars' Guild, is holding final tryouts tonight in Guild Hall, 2115 Fifteenth Street Northwest, at 8, for parts in the new season's productions, which will get under way October 12, 13 and 14 with "Ladies in Retirement," to be followed by "Johnson Over Jordan," a J. B. Priestley play hitherto unproduced in America; "The Merchant of Yonkers" and "On Borrowed Time."

Discretion-Is-the-Better-Part-Etc. Note

As may have been noticed, the next two bookings at the National Theater might be piled up something like this:

"SEPARATE ROOMS"

Films Could Learn From Fliers

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 2. Going through Seattle learned an awful lot about Mr. W. A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines. Before defense program went through, when the air business wasn't doing so well, he was advised to cut salaries. Being a stubborn kind of guy he refused.

CARY GRANT

So wrote the heads of each department asking how they could cut down costs, wanted opinion for better service. What he got was a saving of $180,000 the first year. The salary cut would have been $150,000. He not only got their respect, but greater cooperation from his fellow workers, and now before making an important speech, he gets the gang together and begs for suggestions. Welcomes them from the lowest priced employe. Can you picture a movie mogul asking an extra what's wrong with his latest picture? Oh, well, now let's be fair. The extra might just tell him, and then where would the poor guy be?

Met a young instructor from Hotchkiss. Among his pupils said several appeared in "Goodbye Mr. Chips." Five returned to England and now in the air service. The young teacher's most exciting star was Bette Davis. Says he, "She tries to be different in each one, but 'Bride Came C. O. D.' not for her." And most exciting male to him is Cary Grant, because his eyes are so alive. Spencer Tracy old dependable. Likes Ronald Colman, but not new leading lady.

Most thrilled girl in town is young Joan Leslie. Planing in from the East, she was rushed to Warners for makeup, learned her lines under the hairdryer, dashed into a scene for "The Male Animal," with Henry Fonda. During her vacation in New York, she gave out 40-odd interviews, made eight broadcasts, one benefit and numerous personal appearances. She says the greatest thrill of her life was being featured in the Broadway parade for "Sergeant York." "I kept remembering," she said, "four years back when I was tramping that same street looking for a job."

With all the beefing about visitors not getting on movie sets after the Hays office edict, there were 34 at one time on the "Playmates" set the other day. Director David Butler lined them up in three rows and gave a lecture on picture technique.

Sam Goldwyn is considering a London picture for David Niven and Vivien Leigh which will allow him to use part of his frozen assets on the other side . . . Don Ameche, now working in "Confirm or Deny" at Twentieth, will again manage to get in on that Notre Dame schedule this year. He's got things all arranged so as to take in the last three games, Navy, Northwestern and Southern Cal.

Irene Dunne is making arrangements to go on concert tour this winter, which will be darned good news to a lot of her fans who never hear a squawk out of her on the screen . . . As soon as Bing Crosby gets himself sorted out, he's off to Argentina on business in connection with his racing stables and also for a much-needed rest, prior to beginning his fall air show.

New Knits Have Woven Fabric Look; Do Not Sag Nor Stretch

Knits are always news, but this year there is something new in knits. "Fullerizing"—a new process of shrinking the fabric after it is woven—is a kind of Saxony knitwear. A far cry from olden-day knitted garments, however, are these modern knits which will not sag, stretch or "sit out"—due to this new processing. The finished product looks like woven fabric, but has all the wearing qualities of knits—such as the dress above. A classic shirtwaist style, it is knitted in one of the smart vertical stripes. Colorful combinations of purple, blue and gray or taupe, brown and green are available.

'Ex-Heavyweight' Now Models In Fashion Shows, She Reports

By Ida Jean Kain

IT SEEMS that what makes you fat girls really eager to buckle down and count calories is to read about someone around your age, weight and measurements who has taken off just the amount of weight and inches you wish you could.

Well fall is the best time of the year to start slimming and here are some shining examples to go by. Perhaps among them you will come across your exact problem.

The first is from a 40-year-old southern woman.

"I should like to tell you about my case. It may encourage someone who thinks her own problem past all help. I am 5 feet 9 inches tall and have a large frame. When I began to diet and exercise, I weighed 190 pounds. I began by gradually cutting down on sweets, starches, etc., and eating more green vegetables. I also took the exercises slowly and gradually. I now weigh 148 and my waist is 30 inches, bust, 36, and hips 38 inches.

Looks Younger, Too

"I feel and look like a different person and my friends tell me I look 10 years younger and the fact that I am asked to model in the style shows tells me that my figure must be good. I am now 40 and have a 16-year-old daughter, but strangers ask if we are sisters! The exercise also helped faulty elimination for which I am most grateful. Whenever I see an exercise particularly adaptable to my needs, I add it to my list. I should be glad for you to publish this or any part of this letter if you think it will help someone else."

Thank you, lady. I am particularly happy to tell your story, for you did it so sensibly and got such beautiful results.

Can you wear a size 40 and wish you could slip into a size 17? Perhaps you can. A reducer from Pennsylvania did. She writes:

"I dieted and exercised for four months and took off 36 pounds and slimmed down from a size 40 to a 17. I feel better than I have in five years. I was always under the impression that dieting was very difficult. Now, I know it isn't—and urge my friends who are overweight, to start. It's a bit hard at the beginning but it gets to be a habit. I wish I could tell you how happy I am since losing that awful burden."

Credit Where Due

And here is a letter from a girl of 20, also a Pennsylvanian:

"Last August one year ago, I weighed 176 pounds so I started to follow your sensible diet and take the exercises and by Christmas I weighed 150 pounds. I am now down to 142 pounds. I feel like a new person and want to give credit where it is due. I am only 20, so you can imagine how unhappy I was to weigh so much."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Pines to Go Out Two or Three Nights a Week With His Wife, Who Boredly Nips Most Invitations In the Bud; Speculating on Divorce, He Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man and for two years I have been married to a sweet, personable and kindly girl. During these two years we have solved many difficulties (many marital hazards) by means of mutual discussion and agreement. But now we are faced by certain matters of a nature so sensitive that I am reluctant to discuss them with her.

Before marriage I was extremely gregarious and could always be found in my spare time attending parties, lectures, church affairs, concerts and other sundry social events. Since marriage, by reason of my wife's lack of interest in anything but staying at home and sleeping, I have been obliged to forego virtually all diversion. As a result, I have become extremely nervous and do not enjoy my wife's companionship as I should.

During the first 18 months of marriage, I wasn't so much bothered by her lethargy. I was in school every evening and was too fully occupied to worry. But now that my evenings have been free for over six months, and I have nothing to do but loaf in my leisure, my state of ennui is alarming. If I suggest an evening at a dance, dinner out, a movie, church, a visit with friends, a boat ride, bicycling, horseback riding or anything else, her response is always the same: "Can't we do that another time?" "Why do you wish to go there?" "You know I can't dance well with you, dear." "I haven't anything to wear." "Is it necessary that we go?"

When I ask if she has any suggestions for spending a mutually enjoyable evening, her reply (nine times out of 10) is: "Where would you like to go?" This type of reply is rather disgusting, after I have considerately exhausted my imagination trying to learn what she would like to do. When she has flatly said that she has housework, etc., to do, she usually consents to my going alone to the club, fraternity meeting or movie. But I am never at ease when out by myself, because I know that two or three days later I will be reminded that I didn't think enough of her to stay home with her. Yet I stay home on an average of five nights a week.

In addition to all this, we are physically incompatible, which causes me considerable unrest, although I have overlooked it mostly; realizing that emotional equality in marriage seldom exists. And while I am not certain this condition contributes to our social incompatibility, at least it doesn't help it any.

Miss Haworth, do you know of any means whereby I can inject new life into our marriage? What can I do to waken my wife's interest in my hobbies? How increase her zest for living? I have exhausted every method I know. I even took her to a good diagnostician, thinking unsuspected ill health might account for her indifference. But she is in sound physical condition.

Is there anything wrong in my wanting to go out with my wife two or three nights a week? Is she justified in her indifference to my preferences? She has an abundance of clothes; in fact, an enviable wardrobe; so there is no excuse on that score. I don't believe it is incumbent upon me to tolerate this situation much longer, although I am willing to try anything to improve it. I detest broken marriages and divorces; and would rather employ divorce only as a LAST resort. Respectfully, PUZZLED.

'Either-Or' Ultimatum May Change Wife's Pace

DEAR PUZZLED: One judges from your letter that you are a super-normal young man—physically energetic, mentally alert and socially active; with broad cultural interests and considerable intellectual capacity. You seem happily aware of and healthily responsive to manifold aspects of the world in which you live. Yet, it appears that for reasons best known to yourself, you have married a girl who is either so neurotic as to shun society, or so dull-witted as to feel perfectly content leading a vegetative-type existence.

The possibility that she is defensively unsociable, as a result of feeling nervously inadequate to the company of people generally, is suggested by her statement: "You know I can't dance well with you, dear." She may prefer staying home to putting herself in situations where she appears (so she thinks) at a disadvantage in comparison to others. Supposing she experienced a wallflower's anguish during her sensitive adolescence, she might then have unconsciously acquired an involuntary aversion to the happy-go-lucky social routine enjoyed by light hearted persons, whose prototypes had often, arrogantly and indifferently crucified her pride.

If this were true, she would only know, today, on the conscious level of her mind, that she feels most comfortable and secure at home—which is to say, remote from the (to her) pitiless arena of social competition. And because one's conscious mind is, for the most part, apprehensively determined to "let sleeping dogs lie" in the subconscious, it follows that she would not willingly ask herself why she feels thus; nor willingly bestir herself to try to conform to your healthier preference.

Her conscious mind would seek to disguise the hurt timidity of her subconscious reaction to special situations—reminiscent of those in which she suffered stinging humiliation as a tenderfoot—by persuading her that she was consistently indifferent to all forms of recreational pursuits. And this impression she would, of course, pass along to you—by wet-blanketing all your suggestions for a "mutual good time."

The fact that she is sexually as well as socially indifferent or inept; and, also, inclined to feel slighted when you go out without her (even after granting you leave to do so), affords strong circumstantial evidence to support the theory that her home-staying preference is more sensitively defensive than clod-like. And, I might say, the former is the more optimistic diagnosis of the two. So long as she is sufficiently alive (or reactive) in spirit to distrust (and hence withhold) herself in relation to her husband as well as to society; to fear love as well as the world outside her door, there is some hope that she may yet work out a better adjustment.

But if she should be devoid of intellectual curiosity and social awareness, which is to say: too "dumb" to be interested in ideas, events and people; and too self-satisfied to wish to improve her personality by developing increasingly greater social effectiveness; and too stupid to recognize the all-importance to marriage of collaboratively building a community of social interests—in that case, I can hold out no hope of your improving the present situation.

It occurs to me, however, that you have made her too comfortable in her stubborn choice, by virtue of your patient, loyal accommodation to her stick-in-the-mud performance. I think it is a mistake to regard the resultant impasse as "too sensitive" to discuss. I believe you should treat the situation to vigorous, free discussion—for the avowed purpose of getting at some plan of action. Confront her with the alternatives of (1) either agreeably meeting you half-way in working out a reasonably varied partnership social program; or (2) amicably dissolving the marriage on grounds of total incompatibility.

Frankly, I judge you to be, basically, as incompatible as two persons could be, who once fancied themselves "meant for each other." Doubtless you came together by chance and remain from habit; or because tethered by a sense of duty. Were you deeply related by love or understanding, the "home front" would be sufficiently soul-satisfying to more than compensate for the stringent curtailment of outside social activities. Since, however, the relationship provides no such compensations, it would be psychic suicide for you to try to spend your life on the shelf, as it were, alongside this figuratively comatose creature.

Inasmuch as a good diagnostician has given your wife a sound bill of health, I propose psychiatric counsel as first aid for what ails her—supposing she prudently decides to overcome her aversion to recreational pursuits, as the only means of retaining your marital companionship. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

That Military Touch

Hollywood, Calif.—Milo Anderson shows the advantages of using a heavy braid trim to achieve the military look in a dress he has designed for Olivia de Havilland's first fall costume. The idea this season, Milo says, is to have a look of precision about clothes of this type, but not to such a degree that a lady looks ready to blow bugles or raise flags. He used alternate rows of gray and navy braid in solid diagonal placements on the entire bodice of a navy angora wool dress.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Patriotic 'Oomph'

PATRIOTISM will be made more glamorous for American women, if Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, famous reformer, has her way.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The intrepid president of the Do Something About It League, just back from her vacation, announced yesterday at her press conference that she intended to make life easier for women who wear cotton stockings and who are deprived of Sunday motor rides.

Mrs. DeGoofey deplored what she called "the recent silk stocking grab," declaring women had acted like "mad squirrels."

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a fashion editor, "don't you think women were motivated by fear of losing the love of their husbands and sweethearts?"

"Possibly. However, I think they feared more losing the general attention of men. And for that, of course, I don't blame them. As you know, I have fought unceasingly throughout my career for the right of women to exhibit their legs. Why should they let the chorus girls and the bathing beauties steal all the thunder along that line?

Hearts and Flowers On Hosiery

"However, women are needlessly alarmed about the situation. Now, I have just taken out a patent on a cotton stocking that will be a bigger attention getter than the sheerest silk hose ever invented.

"Remember the clocks women used to wear on their stockings? Now they were sure fire attention getters from men. Every early man novelist, if I remember rightly, was always describing these clocks on his heroine's hosiery.

"Now, on my stocking, I expect not only to have clocks embroidered, but all sorts of attention getters—flowers, birds, bees, hearts spliced with arrows, names, and, above all, sentimental mottoes. Why, I ask you, should a woman display such a motto as 'I love you truly' only as a shoulder gadget, when she can wear it much more effectively on her legs? And why should a woman not have her name neatly embroidered on her hosiery? Think what a convenience this would be for newspaper photographers!

"I also plan to have stockings on which Republicans, Democrats, Methodists, Baptists, D. A. R.'s, etc. reveal their affiliations and beliefs. What would be more effective than for members of a women's club to have their emblems embroidered on their hosiery? Especially since it is so difficult for them to find room on their chest for all their insignia. Also, what would be more attention getting? Why, the woman in mere silk or Nylon hosiery will simply be a street wallflower after my hosiery is put on the market!"

Double Bicycles To Aid Romance

To offset gasless Sundays, Mrs. DeGoofey announced she was seeking to bring about a return of the "bicycle built for two."

'Incidentally," she said, "the Nation would never have faced this gasoline shortage if Congress had listened to me several years ago and had taken proper measures against the motor car exhibitionists who have wasted millions of gallons of our gas supply honking at pedestrians blocks away.

"However, to return to the bicycle, I think my plan will be a great aid to romance as it will do away with the 'three's a crowd' problem which is becoming so prevalent in modern society. It will also decrease the number of fat, flabby men, who have gotten that way by sitting behind motor car wheels.

"Also, I expect to have my double bicycles equipped with horns, rattles and all sorts of noise-makers to the riders may have just as good times as if they were in a Sunday traffic jam on a highway."

Mrs. DeGoofey announced that she would soon stage a patriotic pageant at Hains Point, at which prominent club women and social grande dames would appear on bicycles wearing her new attention getting cotton hose.

Use Bottle For Doorstop

A DAINTY doorstop—this "Southern Belle!" She's sure to be a welcome gift or a best-seller at bazaars.

You'll find she's easy to make, using a milk bottle as a base. Start by winding a folded 2-by-20-inch strip of muslin around the neck of your bottle. Sew securely. Then screw an every-day wooden doorstop (minus the rubber tip) into a stick of wood

Now fill your milk bottle almost full of sand. To make shoulders for the "belle" cut two more strips of muslin, 2 by 7 inches, and to each side of the doorstop tack the center of a strip. Carry endts of each to opposite side; sew firmly.

Labor Day Is Over, But Gaiety Goes On

Zeva Fish and Mrs. Harriman Figure In Dispatches From the Joyous North

By Carolyn Bell

It may be "after Labor Day" by the calendar, but that does not mean that Washingtonians are returning to their bailliwicks. Far from it. According to reports from Martha's Vineyard, Newport and other points north Capitalights are still making things gay in that section.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, erstwhile Minister to Norway, who has been spending the month at a cottage on Martha's Vinyard, has as her guest her daughter, Mrs. Harriman Russell. They plan to linger on a bit at the Massachusetts resort, before she returns to Washington.

Several days ago Mrs. Harriman gave a talk on her thrilling experiences in Norway during the invasion. She lectured at the Martha's Vineyard Tabernacle and some 1500 of the swank "beachcombers" turned out to hear the former Minister relate her adventures with refugees, Nazi soldiers and the royal family.

Two post debs, Miss Zeva Fish and her cousin Miss Beth Kean, have been relaxing at Martha's Vineyard after several weeks at other New England resorts.

Miss Fish Is Guest Of Laura Blair

Miss Fish, who is the daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, is now at Bar Harbor where she is visiting Laura Blair, daughter of Mrs. Gist Blair of this city. Miss Fish expects to postpone her return to the Capital until quite late in the season. Following her whirl in Bar Harbor she plans to go to New York City instead of returning here.

The girls were in Martha's Vineyard for a rest and were accompanied by Representative and Mrs. Fish. They all had a cottage at the Hackercrew. At present Representative and Mrs. Fish are visiting in his district, which would be upstate New York. They will be returning to Washington shortly.

Guests Include Tennis Players

Miss Kean is now at her home in New Jersey for a week. She visited Miss Blair earlier in the season. Both Zeva and Beth spent a gala time at Newport during tennis weeks as guests of Baroness de Villiers Terrage of this city and her daughter, Jeanne Marie. They were widely entertained at dinners, luncheons and other fetes when the guests also included the tennis players.

MORE NEWPORT NOTES: Climax of the holiday weekend at the chichi resort was the dance recital given on Sunday by Miss Theodora Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald B. Roosevelt, of Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island. The summer colony was out en masse to see the performance. Miss Roosevelt exhibited with her instructor Alexander Tolas. Assisting at the program were Nina Tarasova, vocalist, and Nicholas Kopeiking, pianist.

Lord and Lady Mountbatten were honor guests at a dinner given by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Beaulieu.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Van Alen were hosts at a cocktail party on Sunday aftrenoon at their Newport residence. Also host was Herbert Shipman, who gave a dinner at Seaview Terrace, and Mrs. E. Bruce Merriman, Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, Mrs. Watts Shermann and Miss Julia A. Berwind were luncheon hostesses.

Wennerberg Returns From Salters Point

The Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Folke Wennerberg, has returned to the legation after spending the holiday with his family in Salters Point, Mass.

Mme. Wennerberg and the children will remain at the New England resort a bit longer. They are planning to return to Washington the end of September.

Tea to Honor Red Cross Aide Of Britain

Lady Louis Mountbatten, of London, official representative of the British Red Cross, will be the guest of honor and speaker at a tea to be given next Monday by Mrs. Dwight Davis at her home, Bayberry Land, Southampton, Long Island.

Mrs. Davis, who is national director of Red Cross volunteer special services, has asked Red Cross workers of the local chapter and the summer colony to meet Lady Mountbatten.

Lady Mountbatten arrived in the United States with her husband, Capt. Lord Louis Mountbatten, who came to take command of H. M. S. Illustrous, the great aircraft carrier of the British fleet which has been in this country for repairs from enemy bombing attacks in the Mediterranean. Lord Mountbatten, a cousin of King George, has had two destroyers torpedoed under him during the present war, and has seen naval action in all of the battles in the present conflict.

Lady Mountbatten, president of the London division of St. John's Ambulance Brigade, a section of the British Red Cross, is a certificated nurse's aide, a first-aider, motor corps driver and a gas rescue workers. She has been on duty many hundred hours in the Great London East End shelter at Tilbury.

Later in September she will visit Red Cross chapters in Los Angeles and San Francisco and at other points.

Nedenia Hutton To Make Debut In Yule Season

Plans are being made for the Christmas season debut of Miss Nedenia Hutton, the blonde daughter of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. In deference to world circumstances, a repetition of the brilliant balls which were given when the two other Hutton girls made their bows to society is not on the schedule for the youngest of the daughters. Miss Hutton will be introduced to New York society at an afternoon tea December 20 at Mrs. Davies, New York house at Fifth Avenue and Ninety-second Street.

Miss Hutton, a graduate of Mount Vernon Seminary, will enter Sarah Lawrence College this month. Before she goes her mother will give the annual preclass party that she has traditionally given since Miss Hutton started school. This time it will be a supper dance September 11 at Hillwood, the Davies' summer home in Roslyn, Long Island.

Miami Captain Charged With Spy Activities

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2—A complaint alleging a conspiracy to use the mails for espionage activities was filed today against Karl Hermann Schoetter, captain of a Miami, Fla., fishing boat, by United States Attorney Mathian Correa.

Schoetter, alias John Charles Post, was accused along with Kurt Frederick Ludwig, a sailor under arrest in Spokane, Wash., and Frederick Edward Sachlosser, 19, and Hans Pagel, 20, both Brooklyn youths.

Schoetter was arrested today in Miami, Fla., by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Arraigned before United States Commissioner Roger E. Davis, he denied the charge and was placed under $25,000 bond. He waived extradition to New York.

In testimony before Davis, Schoetter said he met Ludwig in Miami recently and that Ludwig, fearing arrest at that time, proposed that Schoetter smuggle him out of the country.

The FBI said Schoetter was a 48-year-old native of Zurich, Switzerland, who was naturalized in 1930.

Last Saturday Pagel and Sachlosser, former members of the German-American Youth Movement, which was part of the German-American Bund, were arraigned on a similar complaint and held in default of $25,000 bond each by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey. Ludwig had been indicted previously on a similar charge.

At a hearing today in Spokane Ludwig was bound over to District court for removal to New York and his bond continued at $50,000.

Of the 33 persons indicted, 14 now have entered guilty pleas to one or both of the counts of the indictment. The 19 remaining are scheduled to go on trial tomorrow.

Those pleading today were:

Everett Minster Roeder, 47, who was employed by the Sperry Gyroscope Co., where Army bombsights are made; guilty to conspiracy to transmit defense information to Germany and innocent to a charge of conspiracy to act as a foreign agent without registering with the State Department.

Max Albrecht Blank, 38, a German citizen formerly employed by the German Library of Information; guilty of conspiracy to act as an agent without registering and innocent to the charge of transmitting defense information.

Gustav Wilhelm Kaercher, 35, who worked in a New Jersey power plant, and George Gottlob Schuh, 54, a United States citizen born in Germany who was employed at a German-American Bund camp in New Jersey; guilty to the charge of being unregistered agents of a foreign power.

'Miss America' Contestants Parade in Broiling Sun

"MOST BEAUTIFUL NONCONTESTANT" in the Atlantic City beauty pageant is Virginia Howe, who represented the District as "Miss Washington" in last year's contest

By Inez (Miss Ineligible) Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

Atlantic City, Sept. 2.—As of even date, this community is the last place in the world for a gal with a squint and bow legs.

The national preoccupation with feminine oomph, ping and personaltiy, particularly when packaged in a one-piece bathing suit, has assembled here 43 charmers or cupcakes from coast to coast, each of whom hopes to wind up on Saturday night as Miss America of 1941.

These contestants in Atlantic City's time-honored bathing contest and beauty pageant got their first public workout today. Under a broiling sun they were the main attraction in an elaborate boardwalk parade in which the chickadees were watched by no less than 250,000 spectators.

As a result of this first parade, Miss California, a blonde of 19 summers, apparently had one leg on the cup tonight. She was declared Miss Personality of 1941 by a solemn conclave of judges, including Joseph E. Widener, the race horse tycoon.

Miss California, christened Rosemary La Planche, was runner-up in the Miss America contest a year ago. There was a slight bit of muttering this eventide when her selection as Miss Personality was announced.

There seemed to be a feeling among a number of the other contestants that the judges could see more of Miss La Planche's radiant personality, since she was dressed in a classy, form-fitting one-piece bathing suit, than was possible with the other young ladies who wore the regulation evening dress prescribed for the event.

Indeed, the muttering grew even more plaintive when it was announced that the Florida State exhibit had won the sweepstakes prize.

Miss Florida of 1941, a blonde who operated at the Atlantic City pageant a year ago as Miss Miami of 1940, was the only other contestant who appeared in today's parade in a bathing suit—a suit as thrifty and as cognizant of the probable national shortage in piece goods as Miss California's.

In any case anyone who wishes to send Miss Florida a congratulatory telegram or a query for her phone number, her name is Mitzi Strother, 19.

If anything further were needed to impress upon the contestants' minds the implication that clothes do not pay, today's parade judges awarded the title "The Most Beautiful Noncontestant" to Miss Virginia Howe, who was Miss Washington, D. C., of 1940.

Miss Howe is now engaged as a performer in an Atlantic City hot spot. Her costume today consisted of a gill of silver spangles strategically placed where they would do the most good—a costume that made Miss Florida and Miss California's one-piece bathing suits look like a Mother Hubbard.

Widow Arrested In Fatal Stabbing Of Army Officer

Los Angeles, Sept. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Marie M. Tucker, widow of Maj. George A. Tucker, who died July 12 of a knife wound, was arrested today on a technical charge of suspicion of his murder.

Later, Superior Judge Benjamin J. Scheinman declined to order her release on a writ of habeas corpus asked by her attorney, Frank Doherty, who contended the California statutes define no such charge as suspicion of murder.

Judge Scheinman ordered a hearing on Doherty's petition next Thursday, but set no bail.

Maj. Tucker died of a knife wound declared by Fort MacArthur Army officers to have been received 11 days previously while he was slicing bread for a sandwich in his San Pedro home. Police and district attorney's officers started an investigation of his death, pointing out that his fatal wound was inflicted outside the Fort MacArthur Military Reservation.

Fast Time Loses in Post's Poll

Clocks in daylight saving areas will be turned back to standard time next September 28—but from present indications, Washingtonians accustomed to setting their alarm clocks at 7 a. m. will get up at that time, as usual.

The Post poll on daylight saving time, conducted for the District Commissioners, ended with Washingtonians opposing it. The vote was 1089 against and 668 for. Commissioner Guy Mason, who came out in favor of the fast time, said the matter will rest with the will of the people.

"Although I favored daylight time, I am not wedded to anything not in the interest of the majority of the people. I personally, received a great number of letters but most of them were opposed to daylight time. Many of the letters came from mothers, who opposed it because of the hot summer nights. They said their children would not be able to get as much sleep if the new time were adopted."

However, a survey of Federal Security Agency employes showed overwhelming interest in favor of daylight saving time. Ninety-five per cent of all returns were in the affirmative.

The survey was conducted by Local 10, United Federal Workers of America, the first week in April and questionnaires were distributed to 4000 employes. More than 1500 returns were received.

Standard time will become effective in all areas except the Southeast unless individual localities desire or are requested by the Federal Government to do otherwise. In the Southeast the Federal Power Commission proclaimed a power emergency and requested advanced time as an electric energy saver. Under the bill now before Congress, President Roosevelt could order clocks in any part of the Nation turned ahead as much as two hours.

FirstLadyExplains Girl Draft Idea

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today offered a further explanation and defense of her widely discussed suggestion that it might be of value to conscript girls between the ages of 18 and 24 for a year of training and service.

Writing in the current Liberty Magazine, Mrs. Roosevelt said "there seems to be a slight misunderstanding" and declared that she never suggested that all women be conscripted, nor that girls be placed under military discipline in camps as are boys.

Envoy's Dog Interrupts Conference

Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador to the United States, held a press conference yesterday that was extraordinary in more ways than one. The ambassador devoted nearly an hour to refuting a series of newspaper articles charging that he and his staff were working in the interests of the Nazi "new order." A transcript of the ambassador's remarks would show that, in the midst of a steady flow of impassioned words, he uttered this sentence: "He won't bite you." To appreciate this remark, it is necessary to get a picture of the press conference. It was held on the terrace of the embassy, a bautiful mansion overlooking Rock Creek Valley that once was owned by John Hays Hammond. Ambassador Henry-Haye sat against a wall, confronting a semicircle of about 40 reporters. At his feet sprawled a handsome black-and-white Dalmatian. A photographer was inching nearer to Ambassador Henry-Haye to get a close-up when the Dalmatian roused himself. He began advancing on the photographer, and the photographer was starting a retreat. At this point the ambassador broke off his remarks about Vichy, spies and blue-prints to say: "He won't bite you." Inquiries at the embassy later brought the information that the dog's name was "Pop." No, that is not French, but American slang for father. The ambassador bought the animal to this country. Incidentally, if Ambassador Henry-Haye had the dog that is owned by Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, some people would be less ready to listen to his disavowal of Nazi sympathies. Lord Halifax's pet is a dachshund.—E. T. F. (Detailed story of Ambassador Henry-Haye's press conference on Page 1.)

Fall Trend: Pencil-Slim Silhouettes

Style trends for fall were shown yesterday at a series of openings by several leading New York shops, successors to the couturiers of prewar Paris. Indications are that this year's fashion brew will call for hipless ladies, to fit into pencil-slim silhouettes. The daring black velvet evening dress at left has a leaf-shaped applique that crosses over a deep yoke of flesh-colored chiffon giving an illusion of bareness. Its slim skirt is split up to the knees. Black, "covered up," and ablaze with gold is the crepe sheath dinner original that has golden laurel leaves entwined on its tiny bolero and tunic

Emphasis on slender lines is embodied in this julep green wool crepe in which a high neckline is formed by pulling one piece of material over the bodice, surplice fashion. In case a few hips still curve beyond slim lines, designers have provided dresses with jutting peplums, tiers

In this coat and dress ensemble, the coat is of Burgundy tweed, the top of a boldly woven herringbone stripe. The dress beneath is a simple Burgundy crepe. Color appears to be the order of the day, judging by the fact that fabric houses have sold 70 per cent colored materials and only 30 per cent of the old fall favorite, black. Many styles will be reminiscent of 1915 prewar effects

Federal Employes Urged to Hold Tongues

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 2.—Federal employes were warned not to talk out of turn, but to be suspicious of strangers who inquire about their work, and not to discuss governmental affairs in public places at the N. F. F. E. biennial convention here today by Louis B. Nichols, assistant director of the FBI. He told of several hitherto unpublished plots by foreign agents to extract vital defense information from governmental workers.

An individual, well known in Washington, Nichols said, plotted to sell agents of a foreign government information on Government employes who were in financial trouble. The individual, Nichols said, told the agents he could get the information through his connections with loan companies in and near Washington. The foreign agents wanted this information, Nichols explained, because they consider financially harassed persons more susceptible to bribes.

Nichols told of another cases in which an American professional man and a woman, both of whom had backgrounds relating them to an unfriendly power, plotted with foreign agents to get defense information from young Federal workers through the age-old device of lavish entertainment.

The chief of the North American Intelligence branch of the foreign country, Nichols revealed, proposed that the American professional man and woman go to Washington and open a "salon" with a view to entertaining young Army and Navy officers and defense workers. The plan was for the Americans to get themselves acquainted with young defense workers and then to introduce them to agents of the foreign governments. The FBI, Nichols told the convention, got wind of both plots and they were nipped in the bud.

The individual in the first case, Nichols said, is in jail. The professional man in the second case made a trip to the foreign country he had planned to serve but he will never return. He died a rather mysterious death while he was there. Perhaps, Nichols indicated, because he knew too much.

Numerous attempts, Nichols said, have been made by subversive elements to place their stooges in the Federal service. A check of their fingerprints at FBI headquarters often unfolds their past records. Specifically, Nichols revealed that a man who was jailed as a German spy in Australia during World War I would have been placed in a key defense position if his fingerprints hadn't given him away. Another person who was jailed for espionage in this country during World War I tried to get a defense job but his identity was made known by a check of his fingerprints at FBI.

"Fingerprints," said Nichols, "serve a very definite purpose in protecting the Federal service and you." He went on to say that subversive elements had inspired attacks against the FBI by circulating rumors that everyone in the country was to be fingerprinted. Nichols thanked the N. F. F. E. and its officers for their cooperation and assistance and said they could always be depended on to be loyal. "We must concentrate," he told the convention, "to keep subversive activities out of the Federal service."

Roosevelt Message

President Roosevelt paid the convention a tribute. In acknowledging an invitation to attend, the President wrote Luther C. Steward, N. F. F. E. president, that "it is clear that you and your organization recognize the tremendous issues facing our people and their Government, and also the responsibilities which those issues place upon Government employes wherever located." The President expressed the hope in his letter that "Government employes will accept their responsibilities in a spirit of service rather than self-seeking, and will continue to bear witness to the fact that good government grows out of the will of the people and not by imposition upon the people."

The convention today adopted a resolution calling for the establishment of a flexible, equitable, and workable system of transfers within the Government service. It also objected to the practice of assigning military personnel to nonmilitary position, which can be filled by civilians. The convention tomorrow will hear Civil Service Commissioner Lucille McMillin and it will hear committee reports.

More than 400 resolutions have been introduced. One resolution, backed by the Montana State Federation, would reorganize the N. F. F. E. governing body. "There is some feeling" the resolution said, "that organization in its present form is not as responsible to the desires of its members as it might be." The Montanans propose that the union be governed by an 11-man council whose members would have to be active Federal employes. The council would be composed of 9-vice presidents, a president and a secretary, all serving without pay.

Under the Montana plan, the council would elect an executive president and executive secretary-treasurer as the only two paid officers. The Montanans believe the council "would be in a much better position to select an adequately qualified person to administer the affairs of the federation than would the convention." Despite the veiled attack against the present officers, President Steward and Secretary-Treasurer Lucille M. McNally will be re-elected by vast majorities, on Friday the closing day of the convention.

Citizens Told Of Progress In Southeast

The Southeast Council of Citizens Associations completed a cycle last night at its first meeting of the 1941-42 year.

Five years ago the body adopted an agenda of 17 projects for whose realization it would work. At last night's meeting in the Eleventh Precinct Police Station, it was announced that all but three of the aims had either been accomplished or were certain of accomplishment.

So William J. Smith, president, appointed Orrin J. Davy as chairman of the committee to draw up a new agenda. Other members will be appointed shortly.

A special committee to investigate the advisability of organizing a bowling league of Southeast Citizens Associations was authorized, and E. J. Read was named chairman.

Chief speaker at the session was W. F. Mulligan, president of the Prince George County (Md.) Federation of Citizens Associations, who stressed the common interests of his organization and Southeast Council.

Colliflower Home Entered; Medals, Cash Stolen

The Cosmopolitan Club's Distinguished Service Medal, awarded him last January, an honorary police badge and a track medal he won at Georgetown University in 1906, were among the items stolen over the weekend from the home of James E. Colliflower, past president of the Board of Trade.

The residence, at 8050 Parkside Lane Northwest, was entered between Saturday and Sunday, according to the report to police. The housebreakers took cash, jewelry and other articles amounting to $866.

Altogether over the Labor Day weekend, according to police records, there were 82 thefts of all kinds in the District.

Army Asks 1005 From D. C.

Local Selective Service headquarters here reported yesterday that they had received a requisition for 1005 more men for October 29. In this total, 845 will be white and 160 colored.

On the ninth of September 166 men will leave for Richmond and 150 negroes will leave for Baltimore.

Northeast Area Asks Surcease From Trucks

Seventeenth Street Northeast, between Benning and Bladensburg Roads, was a quiet residential section until three months ago.

Now heavy trucks rumble on it from dawn till dusk; it provides a perfect short cut for the rumbling vehicles which formerly passed it by en route from Anacostia to Maryland.

Instead of moving on down to the intersection of Benning and Bladensburg Roads and making the elbow turn there, the trucks now turn onto Seventeenth Street and save perhaps a quarter of a mile and miss a traffic light.

"Three people have put their houses up for sale because of it," said David R. Huddle, who lives at Seventeenth and L Streets. "The street is torn up so badly you get jostled every time you drive on it. Several houses have developed cracks in the chimneys and walls."

Sixty of the residents have petitioned the District Commissioners for relief, and the Commissioners have directed Ninth Precinct police to investigate.

An early-morning count disclosed that 63 trucks passed along the little residential street between 5 and 7 a. m. one morning, said Huddle.

Morris Opens Aquafete With Red Cross Plea

Edgar Morris, general chairman of the Silver Anniversary Roll Call Committee of the District Red Cross, opened the Red Cross Aquafete at the Takoma Pool, Fifth and Van Buren Street Northwest, last night with a plea for every District resident to join in the good work of the organization.

Morris stressed the added importance of aiding the Red Cross since the beginning of the war in Europe and said that everyone will get an opportunity to do so when the Silver Anniversary Roll Call begins on September 22.

More than 5000 persons filled the Takoma Pool stands last night to watch the water spectacle staged by more than 500 Washington boys and girls. The show consists of about a hundred swimmers. Other performers were entertainers from local theatrical groups. The show will be repeated every night this week through Friday.

Police Doubt Catoe's Story Of 1935 Killing

Whether Jarvis Catoe, killer of six women, has exonerated another man by confessing the murder of a seventh remained in doubt last night.

Skeptical of Catoe's story, the police were nevertheless investigating. They believed it too soon to reach conclusions.

Mrs. Florence Dancy, 65, Negro, was found criminally attacked and slain in her home at 2139 L Street Northwest on April 12, 1935. James M. Smith, 39, Negro, was convicted on the testimony of three witnesses that he was the man seen going into Mrs. Dancy's house at the time. He is now serving life in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

Since his arrest, Smith has claimed he was innocent. At one time his protests that he was framed were so vigorous that he was sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital and remained two years before he was sent away as sane.

After admitting six other murders, Catoe said he killed a woman in this neighborhood around Christmas six years ago. Wrong about the date, Catoe correctly reconstructed the crime and described the plan of the house. The general pattern of the killing followed that of others admitted by Catoe in confessions which have been accepted without challenge.

Homicide Squad Chief Jeremiah Flaherty pointed out, however, that all the houses in that block have the same floor plans.

Acting District Attorney John W. Fihelly said no report on this case had been received from the police. Should it be established that Catoe is telling the truth, Smith would have no remedy at law, but could seek release by a Presidential pardon.

The court records indicated that Smith would have been in prison anyway. When convicted of the murder he was under a five to seven year sentence for a previous criminal attack, which would not be completed until November this year. Also, when he was sentenced for the more grave offense, the Government dropped indictments charging him with bigamy, larceny and housebreaking.

Check on Files Of Road Agency Starts Today

R. F. Camalier, municipal adviser to the Senate District Committee, and H. K. Bishop, chief of the division of highway construction of the Public Roads Administration, today will begin an examination of the files of the District Highway Department to determine if they form a correct answer to the Comptroller General's charges of inaccurate bidding methods.

The Commissioners replied to the Comptroller General's charges last week, categorically denying them and basing their statements on the records of the department.

Camalier said yesterday that their two-man investigation of the department's files will determine whether a public hearing will be held in the near future on the question by the Senate Committee.

Catoe Held For Grand Jury Action

300 Mill Outside Morgue During Hearing Jammed By 100 Persons

Jarvis Theodore Roosevelt Catoe, confessed slayer of seven women, yesterday was held for action of the grand jury in the rape-strangulation of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff.

He was denied bail and taken to the jail within 5 minutes after the coroner's jury returned a verdict at 2:23 p. m. The defendant did not testify.

More than 100 persons jammed every available seat in the hearing room at the District Morgue. As a precautionary measure, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, had the police register all spectators who were not known to attaches of the coroner's office.

A crowd estimated at about 300 milled outside the Morgue, waiting for a glimpse of Catoe when he arrived. Most of them had been denied entrance because of limited seating facilities.

A detail of 14 policemen was assigned to various points around the building. Two stood guard at windows in the rear of the hearing room. The detail was in addition to the four policemen g arding the prisoner.

Hearing Delayed

Scheduled to begin at 11:30 a. m., the hearing was delayed until 12:55, awaiting the arrival of District Attorney Edward M. Curran, who had been vacationing at Bangor, Me. The chief prosecutor was due to arrive in Washington at 11:15 but his train was delayed.

First witness called to the stand was Private Ellison Boatman of the Third Precinct, who responded to a radio call on June 16, when Miss Strieff's nude body was found in a garage behind 1717 Q Street Northwest.

Boatman's story was brief. He described the position of the body and told the jury the garage doors were open. In response to a question from Coroner MacDonald, Boatman said the doors to the garage were never closed because they were difficult to operate.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, chief investigator of the Strieff case, was the principal witness. He told of his examination of the garage and an interview he had with Christine Tankersley, Miss Strieff's roommate at 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

In the absence of Miss Tankersley, who is out of the city, Tolson repeated her conversation with him. He said he was told Miss Strieff had left her apartment about 2:10 p. m. June 15 to get a stick of butter. It had begun to rain, the investigator said, and Miss Strieff was carrying a borrowed umbrella.

Confession Quoted

Tolson's testimony from June 16 jumped to August 28 when Catoe was arrested and taken to the homicide squad for questioning. The prisoner, Tolson stated, said he lived with Emma Lommax, Negro, at 1740 U Street Northwest, and had driven her to work June 15.

Catoe, in his confession, Tolson asserted, said he agreed to pick up Emma if it rained and was bound for her when he observed Miss Strieff at Nineteenth Street and Florida Avenue Northwest.

Miss Strieff hailed him, Catoe said, according to the witness, and remarked to him: "I thought you were a cab driver."

Catoe said Miss Strieff asked him where there was a delicatessen store and that he agreed to take her to one. He drove west on Florida Avenue and made a "U" turn in front of a store near Connecticut Avenue. Miss Strieff observed the store was closed.

"I'll drive you to one on Fourteenth Street," Catoe quoted himself, said Tolson.

"He said he drove east on Florida Avenue to Seventeenth Street, south on Seventeenth to S and east on S to Sixteenth Street. He turned north on Sixteenth to an alley and turned east into the alley behind the 1500 block S Street Northwest," Tolson said.

Umbrella Produced

Miss Strieff put up a struggle when Catoe turned into the alley, Tolson said, still relating the contents of Catoe's confession.

"He said he grabbed her by the throat and pushed her to the floor of the car," Tolson declared. "He backed his car into the garage behind 1509 S Street Northwest, tore off her clothes and then raped her.

"He told us he at first was going to leave the body in this garage," the investigator continued, "but said he heard voices coming from behind the garage and was afraid he would be caught. He then drove to the rear of the 1700 block, Q Street, where he left the body."

Tolson produced an umbrella as evidence and said the umbrella was obtained from Esther Hall at 1532 S Street Northwest, on information obtained from Catoe.

Clean-shaven, wearing a clean white shirt, blue tie, dark coat and trousers, Catoe sat unmoved through the testimony. He kept his eyes on the witnesses, but his expression never changed.

Most of the time he twiddled his thumbs or spoke under his breath to the policemen to whom he was handcuffed.

When he was taken to the room after the hearing, he waved to relatives. He smiled as he stepped into a patrol wagon bound for jail.

Miss Betty Stribling, of 1426 Twenty-first Street Northwest, friend of Miss Strieff, was called upon to identify the umbrella. She said it was hers and that she had loaned it to Miss Strieff on June 6. She pointed out several frayed places in the fabric and also the handle.

Esther Hall, Negro, of 1532 Swann Street Northwest, was called by the coroner to identify the umbrella and relate in what manner it came into her possession.

She said she had known Catoe for 2 or 3 years and that he frequently gave her presents which included a watch, housecoat, hat and an umbrella.

"He was out in the rain a couple of weeks ago," Esther stated, "and when he came back he was carrying a white umbrella."

"Can you identify the umbrella?" Dr. MacDonald asked.

"That's it there," she replied, pointing to the umbrella on the coroner's desk.

She said she did not know where the presents Catoe gave her came from.

Other witnesses included Stanley L. LeBlanc, of 1426 Twenty-first Street Northwest, Miss Strieff's fiance; Francis E. Williams, Negro, maid at 1717 Q Street Northwest, who found the body, and Miss Jean Roberts, a friend of Miss Strieff.

LeBlanc told of searching the apartment house during the Sunday afternoon and night following Jessie's disappearance and how the janitor refused him admittance to the basement. He said he was engaged to be married to her and that he had known her since October.

District Attorney Curran said the facts in the case will be placed before the grand jury this morning and that if Catoe is indicted the trial will begin as quickly as possible.

Catoe's family, including three brothers and two aunts, sat through yesterday's hearing. They provided the suspect with three lawyers, despite his statement that he did not wish counsel. The attorneys are Walter M. Shea, George Boden and J. Robert Esher.

'The Meddler' Steals Dinner From Women a Second Time

ONLY BONES REMAINED when Myrtle Boyles and Val Kirkpatrick arrived at their apartment anticipating a chicken dinner

Miss Myrtle Boyles, a War Department secretary, and Miss Val Kirkpatrick, women's apparel store clerk, headed for their apartment at 2003 H Street Northwest last night, their mouths watering for a platter of fried chicken, a bunch of grapes and a cantaloupe they had prepared for the evening's meal.

But when they got there somebody had broken into the apartment. The chicken bones were piled neatly on the platter. So were the grape seeds. And the cantaloupe rinds.

On the table was this note: "We were hungry, so we ate your chicken and grapes and cantaloupe. Guess who?" It was signed, "The Meddler."

It was the second time in the last few months that a "meddler" had consumed her groceries, Miss Boyles told Policeman Theodore Fason.

"I wish you'd put him where he can't meddle any more," she said.

No note was left by thieves who ransacked the home of George C. DeBord, District Health Department bacteriologist, at 1425 Manchester Lane Northwest. Returning from a Labor Day holiday yesterday, he reported burglars had drunk four bottles of soft drinks but had stolen nothing else.

Fire Damages Takoma Dwelling

Fire of undetermined origin demolished the two-room apartment in the basement of 621 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., yesterday. Damage was estimated at $500.

Four families occupying the two upper floors of the two-story wooden house were forced to the street as Takoma volunteer firemen fought the flames for nearly two hours.

Firemen said they believe the fire began in the furnace room. The property is owned by F. H. Robbins.

Army Center Work to Start In 2 Weeks

Quartermaster Depot Will Be Its Site; Roosevelt Reveals Pentagonal Design

Construction work on the War Department's 35-million-dollar "dream building" at Arlington, Va., quartermaster depot will begin "within a couple of weeks," Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, construction chief in the Quartermaster General's Office, said last night.

President Roosevelt announced the definite site of the building, which will be of five-sided shape and will house some 20,000 employes, at a press conference yesterday.

The Chief Executive declared that plans for the eventual location of Army and Navy units on the so-called Northwest Quadrangle, near the old Naval Hospital, had not been abandoned.

It is planned to move offices of War Department workers to the rectangle after the emergency has passed and convert the "dream building" into a structure to house Government records, he said.

View Won't Be Marred

The definite announcement by the President, placing the new building on the quartermaster site north of Columbia Pike and fronting on the Washington-Richmond Highway, ends conjecture on the building's location, which was to be the old Arlington Experimental Farm, just across the Memorial Bridge, when Congress appropriated the sum.

In favor of the present site is the fact that it does not interfere with the view of Arlington Cemetery with its Lee House, the President pointed out.

The fact that it will house 20,000 instead of 40,000 provided for in the original plans will lessen transportation difficulties, he said.

Approval of the site has been expressed by the National Park and Planning Commission, the Fine Arts Commission and the Budget Bureau, it was stated.

Plans a Compromise

The President's announcement followed a conversation with Gen. Somervell.

The plans for the structure are evidently a compromise between the President and Gen. Somervell, who is understood to have favored a building housing 40,000 workers on the Experimental Farm location.

One of the 15 interior courts will be confronted by a solid, windowless block in the new structure, the President said. Previously there was proposed a solid block of a building, with windows only on the outside walls, and the employes would work mainly with artificial light and mechanically supplied fresh air.

3 Children Injured By Firecracker Powder Blast

Three children were cut and burned yesterday by an explosion of firecracker powder in the side yard at 3556 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

The victims, Ellen Baxter, 9, and Darnell Sherry, 7, of the Thirteenth Street address, and Nancy Thompson, 9, of 3546 Thirteenth Street Northwest, ignited the powder which they had poured into a hole, police said.

All were taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment of cuts and powder burns on their legs, arms and faces.

Investigators said the children told them they had found a quantity of firecrackers in a trash barrel in the alley. They broke open the firecrackers, poured the powder into a jar and then poured it from the jar into a hole in the ground.

When they touched a match to it, the blast was such that it was heard for two blocks around.

Pop Concerts To Have 'Strauss And Beer and Kern'

"We'll have sociability and Straus, beer and Jerome Kern; it will really be swell," Dr. Hans Kindler said last night in announcing the inauguration of a series of pop (popular) concerts for Washington which will begin September 22.

The National Symphony Orchestra conductor revealed that plans had been completed to seat 4200 persons, "1200 of whom will be on the main floor, sitting at tables where they can order beer, wine and sandwiches." The concerts, an innovation in Washington, will be given at Riverside Stadium on Monday and Thursday night through a three-week period ending October 8. The full National Smyphony Orchestra will play.

Dr. Kindler said he would conduct the opening concert and that there would be five guest conductors and various popular soloists.

Kirby Higbe Takes 19th Win of Year

Flock Only 2 Points Behind Cards After Playoff of 2-2 Tie; Al Javery Chased

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 2.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, experts at doing things the hard way, today won the game they should have won yesterday, 9 to 2, over the Boston Braves, and regained a virtual tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for the National League lead.

It was a playoff of the 2-2 six inning tie with which the Dodgers and Braves capped their Labor Day double-header and brought Brooklyn a total of two victories for 30 innings of work in the last two days.

It gave the Dodgers 84 victories and 46 defeats for a .646 percentage compared to 83-45 and .648 for the Cardinals, who had an open date.

No Doubt at All

There never was any doubt about the outcome of the contest itself. The Dodgers rolled three runs across in the first inning and piled up four more in the weird fourth.

On top of this Kirby Higbe, looking fiercely determined with a two-day's growth of beard, pitched no-hit ball for five innings, allowed only six safeties over the whole route, and easily achieved his nineteenth victory of the season—highest total in the senior circuit.

The Dodgers went to work on Al Javery in the first frame, loading the bases on a hit batsman, Pete Reiser's single and a walk to Dolph Camilli. Then Jim Wasdell forced Camilli and two runners scored on what looked like a double-play ball, Reiser racing wildly around third and touching home with his outstretched hand after sliding past. Lew Riggs followed with a double-scoring Wasdell.

Herman Singles

Billy Herman singled to open the third, but was forced by Reiser. Camilli singled him to third and took second himself when Paul Waner fumbled. Wasdell and Riggs hit successive singles, each good for a run, and Frank Lamanna replaced Javery.

He walked Peewee Reese to fill the bases. Then Mickey Owen singled two runs across, but was trapped himself trying to reach second. In the rundown the Braves suddenly noticed Reese standing off third and a snap throw to Sebby Sisti caught him while Owen slid into second safely.

The Braves made a run in the sixth on Gene Moore's single, a double by Max West and Carvel Rowell's single and added another in the eighth on West's single and Rowell's double.

The Dodgers finished with two in the seventh on a walk to Reiser, Wasdell's double, a wild pitch and an infield out.

Yankees Leave DiMaggio Behind For Treatment

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2—The New York Yankees left for Boston tonight without their injured outfield star, Joe DiMaggio, who was left at home for treatment by Dr. Emmett Walsh, the club physician.

DiMaggio twisted his left ankle at Detroit August 19 and has not played since, although he continued to travel with the Yanks and did not reach here until today.

It also was learned that DiMaggio has a sore wrist which he apparently hurt sliding into home against the Philadelphia Athletics two days before he injured his ankle. At the time the wrist did not pain him, however, and Dr. Walsh said it was only slightly sprained.

Manager Joe McCarthy still is recuperating from a gall bladder ailment at a Washington hospital and club officials said they not know when he would be able to rejoin the team.

Redskins Fine Jack Banta $50 For Tardiness

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 2.—The first disciplinary fine of the training season was slapped on Jack Banta, last year's Southern California halfback, today. Banta reported to camp this morning after having been ordered to fly here last Saturday from Chicago where he played in the Bears-All Stars game. Redskin officials were not satisfied with his explanation of the delay and the rookie was fined $50.

In good condition as the result of his training with the All Stars, Banta swung right into action and appeared to be a promising player. He is on the small side as pro backs go, being 5 feet, 10 inches tall and weighing around 185 pounds. Banta showed ability as a pass receiver and held his own in a punting drill with George Smith, Sammy Ball, Roy Zimmerman and Dick Todd. He looks a lot like James Cagney and West Coast fans say he is as cocky as the movie star acts.

Fred Davis, former Alabama tackle who is considered "home" as far as making the team is concerned, was out of action with an infected foot and has been placed under the care of a physician. Red Morgan, the end, also was absent, having been called home due to his mother's serious illness.

G. U., Maryland Grid Squads Open Fall Training Grind

Of the 37 men expected by the Hoyas' Head Coach Jack Hagerty and Line Coach "Mush" Dubofsky, 35 reported in fair condition for practice. Back Joe Gyorgydeak and Guard Angelo Paternoster, the absentees, have announced they will report later in the week, however.

Outstanding losses to the Hoya team are Earl Audet, candidate for a tackle position, who will attempt to enter Southern California this year, and Ross Sorce, another tackle who will take his physical examination for Army Service Friday. Conditioning exercises, ball handling and signal drills will occupy the remainder of this week, with scrimmages scheduled for early next week. The schedule starts September 26 against Mississippi.

Maryland's squad also had several absentees as it met for the first time this year under Jack Faber, Al Heagy and Al Woods, but none were crossed off the list for good. Chief among these were John Cordyack, blocking back; Hal Berry, guard, and George Simlar, sophomore end. Twelve lettermen were on hand, however, forming a fine nucleus for the team which will face Hampden-Sydney on September 27 in the Terps' opener.

Saratoga Betting, $13,590,793, Sets New York Record

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2.—Pari-mutuel betting during the meeting which ended at Saratoga last Saturday set a new high, the New York State Racing Commission announced today. Its figures showed a total of $13,590,793 passed through the machines, compared to $11,525,781 in 1940.

The State's income, on five per cent of the total betting and a half-share of the breakage, was $790,783.33, an increase of more than $110,000 over a year ago.

Total attendance for the meeting was 316,873, an increase of 34,598 over 1940, and the average daily total in wagers was $453,026, compared to $384,192 in 1940. The average bet per person per day was $42.89, and the average per person per race $5.69.

Grant Beats Mulloy; Steals Tennis Show

Georgian Flashes Old-Time Form in Forest Hills Upset; Bobby Riggs Victor

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2.—Bryan Grant, jr., of Atlanta, continued to supply practically all the excitement in the National Tennis Championshhips out on Long Island today.

As today's contribution toward lifting an otherwise dull tournament out of the doldrums, the Southern veteran knocked the socks off big Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, the eighth seeded star, by the quick scores of 6—3, 6—3, 6—2.

The upset came just in time to prevent the seeded men players from going in tomorrow's quarter-final round with ranks unbroken. Only yesterday, Bitsy Grant knocked out the seeded foreign artist, Pancho Segura, of Ecuador.

Back in Stride

Against Mulloy today he bore a striking resemblance to a little fellow named Grant who unexpectedly stiffened the defending champion, Ellsworth Vines, in the championships here nine years ago. He knocked the ball back, as always, and permitted Mulloy to make the errors. Grant scored only 10 points by placements in the three sets, which probably gives the clearest idea of what happened.

The distinction of supplying the lone upset in the women's ranks went to comely Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia, who turned back seventh-seeded Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, 4—6, 6—4, 7—5, in a beautifully fought match that went almost into darkness. Otherwise the stars came through on schedule, with Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, establishing herself a temporary favorite through a convincing 6—0, 6—2 win over Phylis Hunter, of Watertown, S. Dak.

Former men's champion Bobby Riggs, of Clinton, S. C., continued to sparkle as he trounced Charles Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2. Bobby has told intimates he doesn't intend to drop a set through the finals. His quarter-final opponent will be Frankie Parker, of New York, who flourished his "new" forehand effectively today in vanquishing Billy Gillespie, of Atlanta, 5—7, 6—1, 6—3, 7—5.

Schroeder Next

Grant next bumps into Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., co-holder of the national doubles title with John Kramer. Schroeder, seeded fourth scored handily today over Charles Mattmann, of New York 6—4, 7—5, 6—2. The other four quarter-finalists Frank Kovacs, Don McNeill, Wayne Sabin and John Kramer, won their berths yesterday.

Tom Mangan, of Washington, D. C., advanced to the third round of the veterans' singles with a 3—6, 8—6, 6—3 triumph over William L. Nassau, of Paoli, Pa.

Helen Jacobs, dean of the women survivors, gave warning today that she is not to be counted out as she scored a convincing victory over Valerie Scott, talented British girl, 6—2, 8—6. Helen, who last won the crown in 1935, looked as good as ever until she tired in the latter stages.

50,000 Fans To See Stars Battle Giants

Collegians Shoot For Second Victory Over Pros; Augie Lio In Starting Line-up

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2.—The Eastern All-Stars, sporting a roster chockful of name players from 18 colleges, applied the finishing touches to defense and offense today for the sixth annual Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund football game with the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night.

The game is expected to draw close to 50,000, a new high for the series.

Their goal will be a second-straight All-Star victory, and with it proof that a squad of highly touted individuals can be welded into just as effective a unit as the bunch of little-known "Okies" who upset the pros, 16-7, a year ago.

Of the 37 men who have been working under Coach Jim Crowley of Fordham, 15 played in Bowl games last New Year's Day for Fordham, Boston College and Georgetown. Five others starred for Cornell, which rode high until its fifth downfall at Dartmouth.

All-Stars Drill Twice

Yet a few of the lads in the probable All-Star starting line-up got there ahead of boys with fatter scrapbooks. Two samples are Charley Seabright of West Virginia at quarterback, over Cornell's Walt Matuszczak and Henry Toczylowski of Boston College, and Pete Dobrus of Carnegie Tech, choice ahead of All-America Nick Drahos of Cornell and Crowley's own John Kuzman.

The All-Stars worked twice today—this morning in their out-of-town training camp, this evening under the lights to get acquainted with the Polo Grounds angles. The Giants, already having won two night games, held themselves to a single drill this afternoon.

In typical Fordham fashion, Crowley expects to rely heavily on the tackle-to-tackle part of his line. The figures say he should do right well, for the five likely starters average over 215 pounds, with George Kerr of Boston College the "baby" at a mere 195.

The Giants, rated considerably stronger than the 1940 club, will use a flock of rookies. Best of these appears to be George Franck, former Minnesota speedboy who was the Collegians' standout in the Chicago All-Star game against the Bears.

Probable starting line-ups:

Shenk (W. Va.)	L.E.	Poole
Dobrus (Carnegie)	L.T.	Cope
Lio (Georgetown)	L.G.	Edwards
D'Filippo (F'd'm)	Center	Hein
Kerr (Boston)	R.G.	Oldershaw
Ungerer (Fordham)	R.T.	Mellus
Cabrelli (Colgate)	R.E.	Howell
Seabright (W. Va.)	Q.B.	Shaffer
Rozran (Penn)	L.H.	Eakin
Eshmont (Fordham) or Lansberg (Cornell)	R.H.	Yeager
O'anski (H. Cross)	F.B.	Leemans

D.C. Fight Body Calls Feather Foes for 'Talk'

The District Boxing Commission yesterday summoned Promoter Ray Alvis and the managers of Joey Archibald and Chalky Wright for a special inquiry tomorrow preliminary to their fight for the featherweight title here on September 11.

Announcing neither the reason for the special session nor the questions that would be asked Alvis and the managers of the two fighters, the commission said merely that "there are matters to be talked over."

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 3, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

In Joe Louis' corner, they don't think a new heavyweight champion will be crowned on the night of September 29 when Louis gives Lou Nova a shot at his title. John Roxborough, who handles most of Louis' affairs, was saying the other night in Chicago that the likes of Nova couldn't lick Louis.

POVICH

"That cosmic punch and that other trick stuff of Nova's makes good reading, but there are no new tricks to this fight business. It will boil down to somebody getting his ears punched off in that ring, and it doesn't figure to be Louis," the champ's comanager was saying. "Joe isn't worried about that cosmic punch as much as he is about getting down some of those long putts he's been missing on his private golf course."

The possibility is, of course, that Louis may have suffered a loss of confidence in himself after Buddy Baer was able to knock him through the ropes for a seven count and after Billy Conn outboxed him for more than 12 rounds. But it seems that Nova would be unwise to count on Louis' confidence in himself being actually shaken. Louis has always had plenty of belief in himself. He has never yet displayed a sign of prefight worry in his six years as a headliner, and he is just the sort of a guy who would take a bride three hours before fighting Maxie Baer in the most important bout of his life.

Louis Weary in Recent Fights

Louis' friends don't admit that he has slowed up despite the narrowness of his recent triumphs in which Abe Simon stayed 13 rounds, Tony Musto stayed nine, Buddy Baer stayed six and Conn had him beaten at the end of twelve. He hasn't been a great champion in those fights, but his handlers kiss them off with a logical sort of explanation.

"Joe went stale, that's all," they point out. "It was a mistake to let him fight once a month as we were doing. He was in training almost continually for eight months and that didn't do him any good. He was a weary guy when the Baer and Conn fights came up. After the Baer fight, we knew he needed a long rest, but we had to go through with the Conn thing."

Louis has had his longest rest in two years since the Conn fight. He has even asked for an extra ten-day postponement before fighting Nova. We don't know whether he is flattering Nova, or whether he's actually concerned about his own condition. It's the first time he ever asked for a postponement. In any event, he seems to be taking the fight seriously enough. And that's enough for most of his friends to go out and get themselves a wager on Louis against anybody.

The increasing tide of support for Nova against Louis is, of course, the outgrowth of the Louis-Conn affair in which the fancy-stepping, rapier-punching Conn bedazzled Louis with his boxing. Louis, a fair sort of boxer himself, was made to look exceedingly crude by the clever Conn. That night the aura of invincibility that had surrounded Louis was completely torn away. They saw the champion fumbling like a stumblebum to find the wrath in front of him.

Nova Offers Stand-up Target

However, nobody has ever accused Nova of being a fancy boxer, and from his exhibitions thus far he should be just the type that Louis should be able to catch up with. Nova is, indeed, a superb physical specimen, but he is on the slow side and presents Louis with a stand-up target of the type he likes. And even Nova, himself, admits that he can't punch as hard as Louis.

"I can take a punch better than Louis, though," Nova told your correspondent a few weeks ago, and that may be true. In fact, Louis showed no liking for the right hand of Max Schmeling and the lefts of Tony Galento and Buddy Baer, all of whom had him on the floor. However, when Nova adds that Louis' punches won't hurt him, he is either supremely optimistic or completely nuts. Tony Galento's punches hurt Nova so much that he was the goriest spectacle ever seen in a Philadelphia ring when they stopped it, and Louis is a harder hitter than Galento.

Nova achieved his greatest fame by winning technical knockouts over Max Baer twice in a dozen rounds, but that fact certainly does not entitle him to enter any ring a favorite over Louis. When Baer was a much younger man, Louis knocked him out in four rounds, and took one punch that Baer always has said was the hardest he ever landed.

The cosmic punch business and the dynamic balance that Nova talks about with a passionate glint in his eye aren't disturbing Louis much. He admits he doesn't understand what they're all about. It may be a cosmic punch ot Nova, but Louis in an interview the other day made repeated references to Nova's "comic punch." He didn't seem very much impressed. We think he'll still have his title on the morning of September 30.

Dear Boss,

Well, Boss, I guess you will think that I purposely tripped Andy Farkas yesterday. It was this way. I was sitting on the sidelines with my notebook on my knee and my pencil cocked, ready as usual for a scoop. Farkas came around end and Bob Seymour forced him out of bounds. Farkas was charging at me and it looked like he was going to make a first down in the pit of my stomach. I threw up my legs and somehow Andy went sprawling. Later it was learned he pulled a muscle. Sounds bad, I know, coming on what I wrote about Farkas and myself but if anybody tells you I tripped him or kicked him or had my fingers crossed to put the jinx on him, it will be at least two-thirds of a lie.

I sort of feel like a heel, Boss, capitalizing on Andy's misfortune but you can't hate me for being an opportunist. I put two and two together today, took the bull by the horns and decided to make the most of Farkas' absence. Before I went to the dressing

Curran Will Settle Sandlot Row Today

Decision on Heurich's Protest of Naval Air Victory Will Be Made at Noon by Official

Whether the Heurich Brewers or Naval Air Station nine will represent Washington in the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament in Youngstown, Ohio, starting Saturday, will not be known until noon today.

At that time District Attorney E. M. Curran, local commissioner of the N. A. B. F., will handdown a verdict on the Brewers' protest of their 9-5 beating by the Airmen in the next-to-last clash of the city title meet.

Announcement of the decision deadline was made by Sergt. W. P. Griffith, chairman of the D. C. tournament, who, after a discussion of the protest with Curran, said:

"The commissioner indicates he will uphold Heurich's protest. At any rate, he seems to think a rule was broken by Naval Air, which would almost automatically give Heurich a victory in the protested game and the city championship."

Details of the protest are: Heurich unbeaten in the D. C. two-defeats-and-out tournament, dropped a 9-5 decision to once-beaten Naval Air last Friday. However, the Airmen's winning pitcher, Jesse Fairley, was allegedly ineligible for action due to a N. A. B. F. rule which says a player must compete in five regular season games in order to play in the city championships. The next day N. A. S. tripped Heurich again, 6-5, to all intents ending the latter's reign as city champion.

If Heurich's protest is upheld, giving it the contested game, the local meet would have ended before the 6-5 game. That would have been Naval Air's second defeat, eliminating it from the tournament.

Root Records 201st Victory; Beats Reds, 3-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Charley Root, veteran Chicago Cubs right-hander, went to work on his third set of 100 pitching victories today, notching the 201st win of his major-league career by beating the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 1, in the final game of the series.

Root held the Red Legs to five hits and allowed their only run in the third when Eddie Joost walked and advanced on a sacrifice and scored on Lloyd Waner's double.

The Cubs made only four hits off Gene Thompson, Cincinnati hurler, but converted half of them, a double by Lou Stringer and a single by Stan Hack, plus a walk and a long fly, into two runs in the third inning. They scored their third marker in the sixth.

Christman Joins Navy—and Just In Nick of Time

Great Lakes, Ill., Sept. 2.—Paul Christman, backfield star last year at the University of Missouri, joined the Navy today—two days before he was due for induction into the Army.

Authorities at the Great Lakes naval training station said the 23-year-old athlete had enlisted in the Naval Reserve, and would be called to active duty in five weeks with the rank of chief boatswain's mate.

Christman will serve as assistant athletic director for the station. He said he would be married next Monday to Miss Inez Potter, of Kansas City. His draft board in St. Louis notified him while he was training for the All-Star football game in Chicago that he was due for induction into the Army at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., on September 4.

88 Navy Grid Players Hold Hard Workout

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 2.—Donning football gear for the first time, 88 Navy gridiron warriors participated today in their initial hard workout of the season.

During an hour and a half session, the Middies hit the tackling dummy, worked on forward pass defense and underwent a punting drill. Linemen faced each other in offensive and defensive maneuvers.

The first team today consisted of Bill Busik, Alan Cameron, Bill Chip and Sammy Boothe, backs; Bob Froude and Willis Maxson, ends; Gene Flathmann and Bill Chewning, tackles; Vito Vitucci and Jack Hill, guards, and Jim Donaldson, center.

The second eleven was composed of Wes Gebert, Sherry Werner, Phil Gutting and Clyde Siegfried, 1940 plebe, backs; Bob Zoeller and Dick Wooten, 1940 plebe, ends; John Hardy, 1940 plebe, and Dick Opp, tackles; Joe Sliwka and A. J. Knox, 1940 plebe guards, and Joe Ringenberg, center.

The players, who have undergone about two weeks of light conditioning in shorts, wore their old gridiron gear today. The new uniforms of navy blue jerseys and gold pants have not yet arrived.

Larson said a new type of headgear, made of plastic material, would be used. "They are light and, we feel, will give more protection than any head harness that we have ever used," he declared.

LaChappelle Meets Leone On Mat Card

Maurice LaChappelle, the popular French grappler, who has won himself a big following in two-man team competition, will engage Angelo Leone of New York, in a 30-minute bout on tomorrow night's mat card at Turner's Arena.

The show will mark the unmasking of the Green Hornet, mysterious hooded grappler, who will take on Pat Fraley, the husky Coast Irishman.

LaChappelle and Leone are old rivals. Their most recent get-together was last Thursday when Frenchy teamed with Frank Judson to trim Leone and Fred (Legs) Grobmier in straight falls.

Rudy Dusek, anxious for a shot at The Hornet, will battle Abe Yourist in a semiwindup match; Milo Steinborn will tackle Judson, and Lou Plummer will scrap with Grobmier.

According to his agreement, The Hornet will enter the ring and remove his hood. Fraley, however, would prefer to do the job himself.

Oil City Player Takes His Base Hits Too Seriously

By the United Press

Durham, N. C., Sept. 2.—President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Baseball Leagues today suspended player Frederick Shoemaker of the Oil City club of the Pennsylvania State League for one year for spitting in the face of an official scorer, Joe Szarfan, Oil City newspaper man.

The suspension from organized baseball is retrcactive to Aug. 8, date of the incident, Bramham said.

Shoemaker questioned the judgment of Szarfan in ruling an error rather than a base hit on a play. The following day Szarfan wrote an open letter to the Cleveland Indians in his column, advising them Shoemaker was eligible for membership in the "royal order of cry babies."

The next night Shoemaker went to the press box, and spit in Szarfan's face. Shoemaker admitted the act in a written statement and received the same suspension handed players for a like indignity against an umpire.

Bramham said the game had no jurisdiction over newspapermen in their capacity as such, but when serving as official scorer they are officials of the game and "as such command the same respect as any official."

Judge Landis Weighs Shift Of Big Series

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2.—A ticklish problem without precedent, the possibility of moving the World Series out of the park of one of the participating teams, will be considered tomorrow at a meeting called by Commissioner Kensaw M. Landis.

The conference itself, set for 10 a. m. (Eastern standard time) is an annual affair to which all teams with a chance to win the championship of either the National or American Leagues are invited.

But the chief question to be decided concerns the handling of the tremendous Brooklyn following should the Dodgers nose out the St. Louis Cardinals for the National League pennant.

The New York Yankees are on the verge of clinching the title in the American League and if the Cardinals, now leading by two percentage points, come through in the senior circuit there would be no problem.

Under normal circumstances the series would open at Yankee Stadium Wednesday, October 1, with two games there, then three in Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, and two more, if necessary, in Yankee Stadium.

Fans Fear Overcrowding

However, Brooklyn fans, hoping to see their idols in their first World Series in 21 years, are afraid of being crowded out of Ebbets Field if the Dodgers win. President Larry MacPhail of the Dodgers spent most of today assembling seating figures for his park, which can accommodate about 33,000 persons comfortably.

These will be presented to Landis, who then will decide whether Brooklyn's share of the games, if any, might be played at Yankee Stadium (capacity 75,000) or the Giants' polo grounds (capacity 55,000).

One alternative that has been suggested would be the rearrangement of the dates so that the Sunday game could be played at Yankee Stadium. This could be accomplished by opening the series in the National League Park.

There is a precedent for this, because both the 1934 and 1935 series opened in Detroit. In the latter year the Chicago Cubs won 21 straight games in September and clinched the pennant on September 27, two days before the season closed. The first two games of the series were given to Detroit instead of Chicago to enable the Cubs to print tickets and complete other arrangements.

Fenlon Given Coaching Boost

Richmond, Va., Sept. 2 (AP).—John L. (Johnny) Fenlon, freshman coach at the University of Richmond for the last two seasons, will step up to the varsity ranks this fall, Athletic Director Glenn F. Thistlethwaite announced today.

He will be No. 3 man on the varsity staff, behind Thistlethwaite and the veteran Mac Pitt.

Thistlethwaite said that varsity and freshman players would be trained together. Ed Merrick, former spider center, who was added to the staff as a full-time coach for this season, will handle the freshmen in their scrimmages with the varsity and in their own yearling games.

Hein Comes to the Cross-Roads

New York, Sept. 2.—There will be a bruising little subdrama behind the central spectacle of the football Giants battling the Eastern All Stars tomorrow night. Mel Hein, grand old man of professional football, will be fighting for his job.

CONSIDINE

It's coming up 11 years since Hein came to the Giants. He made the all-league second team, his first two years up. Then the selectors realized that in Hein they had been looking at perhaps the best center who ever lived. Certainly the best pro center. He was all-league all through the rest of the 1930's. He did things that football fans never expected to see a center do. He made tackles in distant parts of the field where few centers ever trod. He intercepted passes galore, and ran well with the ball. His roving behind the line, on defense, gave most of us who have become bewildered by modern football attacks our chief clue to what was happening to the ball.

The Giants brought up some good centers over the past decade, but they never saw service. Hein was a 60-minute per game man, seemingly for years. Nothing could dislodge or dent this big, shy guy who last year was given a "day" that never has been equaled in pro ball.

Best in Business Oppose Him

Tomorrow night he'll be opposed by two of the finest centers developed in college ranks in recent years. One is 6-feet-4, 245-pound Chet Gladchuck, late of Boston College. The other is Lou DeFilippo, late of Fordham. They will do the centering for Jim Crowley's All Stars, but once the game is over both of them become the property of the New York Giants. It's hard to see how Hein, for all his genius for playing his difficult position, will be able to hold his perennial place as the Giants No. 1 center in the face of competition such as Gladchuck and DeFilippo will offer.

But we'll write no obituary for Hein's career as the center of attraction of the Giants. His legs may have lost something, and his appetite for the rough business may have become a little jaded with the years. But, by gosh, he's got a head the likes of which few of us ever saw. And he'll know how to use it to hang on to his job a little longer. Gladchuck or DeFilippo, or both, may be superb tomorrow night. They'll have to be, to loom over the old bloke who brought new meaning and new personality to the semi-anonymity of centering.

Tennis lost a colorful and competent figure when 69-year-old Ben Dwight, the best umpire in the game, dropped dead at Forest Hills yesterday. The shock of his sudden death—he died while making umpiring assignments for the remainder of the day's matches—cast a pall over the men who knew him. But many of them felt that Dwight died happy. He passed out in harness, his U. S. L. T. A. badge fluttering on his coat, and getting ready to climb into an umpire's chair for the zillionth time in his life.

No Sass From the Wise Guys

Dwight was the Bill Kem of tennis. He took no sass from the fancypants. He spurned their glares and bleats. He never said "I never missed one in my life," but his manner and voice indicated as much. He was a strong-looking man, for a tennis official. He had been an outstanding athlete at Yale in the '90's . . . Baseball and football. He never was a very good tennis player. But he knew more about the rules of the game, and the so-called knotty problems, than any other person. He helped the sport a lot by forming umpiring groups throughout the country, and thus wiped out the old practice of dragging reluctant spectators out of the gallery and deputizing them as umpires or linemen. He did a lot of good for junior tennis, too. Against doctors orders he officiated at a tennis clinic yesterday morning in the blistering sun.

He had a way of silencing the rowdiest kind of crowd. He'd harumph ominously and then intone "Will——the——gallery——please——refrain——from——making——unnecessary——noise——while——the——ball——is——in——play." He never put a question mark on the end of the dirge. It was a declarative sentence, and command. He was never in doubt, and had the gumption to call them as he saw them. Last year in the finals, which he had umpired for a generation, Bobby Riggs, the defending champion, scored a vital point against Don McNeill in the last few moments of a fearfully close final set. The crowd roared its approval, but Dwight silenced it, and gave the point to McNeill. He alone had seen Riggs' spiked shoe-tip touch the bottom of the net just after he made the winning volley.

Schindler Wins 50-Lap Race At W. Lanham

Wild Bill Schindler, the one-legged speedster from Freeport, Long Island, handily captured the 50-lap Southern States Derby, which featured the seven-race midget auto card at the West Lanham Speedway last night.

Driving like a cabbie with a ten-dollar fare, Schindler pushed Mike Caruso's little blue-and-white Offenhaused No. 4 to the hilt in the 12½-mile grind to finish in 12:22.27, nearly a lap ahead of his closest competitor. This performance netted him $295 in prize money. Second place went to Len Duncan of Brooklyn, whose V-8 brought him $215 award.

Don Morris, also tooling a V-8, finished third, and Ernie Gesell, one of the favorites, ran fourth. Gesell did a masterful bit of driving to finish in the money for his fleet little Offy got temperamental and forced him into the pits before the race was well under way. Coming back, Gesell made a reckless bid that brought him back past the stragglers in spectacular style.

Schindler's mount took the first and fourth preliminary heats and Wild Bill was a top-heavy favorite in the nightcap. He jumped from his pole position into first place at the flag and held it all the way. Walt Walker and Johnny Ringer made a determined bid to beat Schindler and they ran one-two-three for more than 30 laps. However, the V-8's faltered at the hot pace and motor trouble forced them out of the cash.

The largest field ever to race at West Lanham—14 cars—started the grind, and on the curves they had the crowd of 7500 hanging onto their seats.

Cuban Expected Today or Tomorrow; Griff Files Another Sharp Protest With Harridge

Clark Griffith yesterday made two moves designed to help his Nats out of eighth place on the eve of six straight games with the seventh-place Athletics starting today. The owner of the Washington club announced:

(1) That he had sent another sharp protest to League President Will Harridge seeking a reversal of the decision that gave Boston a forfeit victory over the Nats last month, and

(2) That he was calling in Outfielder Roberto Ortiz of the Charlotte club immediately.

In his newest protest to Harridge concerning the forfeiture to Boston of a game in which the Nats were leading, 6 to 3, in the eighth inning, Griffith challenged the authority of Harridge to order the forfeit.

"The Washington Club got a bad deal from the umpires," said Griffith heatedly. "Their report to Harridge said that Bucky Harris refused to order the groundkeeper to cover the field when the game was stopped on account of rain. The umpires never ordered Harris to get the field covered, so how could he refuse?

"The umpires didn't see fit to forfeit the game on the spot, so how could Harridge order a forfeit? No game in the history of the American League has ever been forfeited except by the umpires. The umpires never did order it forfeited. They ordered Carrasquel to resume pitching in the eighth inning after waiting a half hour, and stopped the game again only because more rain fell. That doesn't sound as if they had forfeited the game because, as they said, Harris refused to get the field covered."

Ortiz will report to the Nats either today or tomorrow. Originally he was not scheduled to leave Charlotte until the middle of the month, but when the Charlotte club lost both games of a Labor Day doubleheader, the defeat knocked the team completely out of the play-off for the pennant.

With the coming of Ortiz, Buddy

Dividend, $16.90 Shot, Takes Towson Purse at Timonium

Brainchild Beaten Out By Bill K.

Lena Girl, Public Choice, Fails Her Backers; Crowd of 5,000 Sees Sport

By Clocker Mike

Timonium, Md., Sept. 2—Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Dividend got away to a flying start and romped home the winner in the featured Towson Nurseries Purse for 3-year-olds and upward horses here this afternoon before 5000 customers.

Dividend crossed the wire a head in front of Bill K. Brainchild challenged the winner for the most part of a mile but could do no better than third. Lena Girl, the public's prerace choice, ran out of the pay off circle.

Wins Under Drive

Apprentice Acosta had to keep the winner under pressure to dispose of Brainchild and then turned her back again entering the stretch. However, the race was far from over. Rufford sent Bill K through on the rail and it appeared that he would make the grade against Dividend. Acosta again went to a drive and managed to keep the filly going.

The race was hardly a world beater when compared to Royal Business' 1:21 but the time of 1:22 2-5 was creditable for a horse the caliber of Dividend. Her mutuel return was $16.90.

The favorite players, who cashed on five of their eight selections on opening day, took a beating in the first event today. They bet on Nyleve and Top Transit until they were each 2-1 but the winner was H. C. Jenifer, jr.'s Shiny Dome, handled by Jockey R. Haber. The youngster was hard ridden to get up in the last few yards to win by a neck over Nyleve, leader for most of the 4½ furlongs. Red Duke, after going very wide at the first turn, came well in enough thereafter to get the show money.

Pays Off at $30

Going to the first turn it appeared that the winner might tear out himself but Heber took a good hold and kept him in. This, however, enabled Nyleve to come through and take command. Haber kept a cool head and made his move entering the stretch instead of rushing his mount. They completed the distance in 57 4-5 and rewarded their backers with a $30 mutuel.

P. H. Faulconer's Zac Pam finally woke up and scored a win when she raced the 6½ furlongs of the second race in 1:23 to reach the wire four lengths clear of Mr. Jim. The latter was two and a half lengths before Gradatim, the favorite.

Handled by Appretnice G. Acosta, Zac Pam could not reach contention early, but when she began to turn on the steam she flew past horses and drew out. She finished the course well in hand and repaid her backers $8 for their confidence.

The daily double number of 3 and 6, Shiny Dome and Zac Pam, paid off to the tune of $139.50 for the usual $2 investment.

Grid Cardinals Sign Two Stars for Season

Chicago, Sept. 2 (INS).—"We may surprise some of the clubs in this league," Coach Jimmy Conzelman predicted tonight. His boundless optimism admittedly was the result of the signing to Chicago Cardinal contracts of Johnn Martin, star University of Oklahoma halfback, and Bill Dewell, veteran end, who was lost to the pro gridders last season when he broke his ankle in the second game.

RED DUKE went very wide at the first turn, came well until the stretch and then hung slightly. THREE NINES showed good speed. TOP TRANSIT had no chance with the start.

ZAC PAM moved up gradually to take command leaving the backstretch, opened a long lead and was in hand at the end. MR. JIM raced with FLICK in the early stages, took command when the latter faltered, but was no match for the winner. GRADATIM lost ground throughout and could never reach the top ones. FLICK ran MR. RED WINGS took a long lead in the run to the turn and just breezed to win well in hand. BARRACA, perfectly handled, saved ground from the start, but was retiring. DUSTY MISS closed with a rush after being outrun early. MICROPLAY was another that saved ground on the rail while moving and then faltered. JUSTA MITE closed well after being practically left. MY FIRST and WAY OUT tired. FLYING CHARGER was through early.

HAPPY HOSTESS was not hurried when outrun by CUT EMERALD, moved to the front on the backstretch and held sway under intermittent punishment. TOWN CAR was in a contending position when he ran out slightly, moved near the leader entering the stretch and faltered in the stretch run. WAUGH SCOUT closed well after being unable to race with speed. CUT EMERALD went through on the rail soon after the start to take command, but weakened. NEW STEP moved into contention and then tired.

——At The Post

Dear Al.

Timonium had the biggest day in the history of the Fair when it played host to some 40,000 fans here on opening day. Of this crowd, some 15,000 bettors were inside the racing inclosure and wagered the largest amount ever sent through the machines at this track. The total handle for the day was $315,958 as compared with $245,078 wagered on opening day here last year. However, this was not the largest amount ever bet at a Maryland track of less than a mile. On closing day at Bel Air, the crowd sent a total of $335,165 through the iron men. All the boys around the track were well fed yesterday. Secretary Matt Daiger gave a free lunch to all track and table employes. The steeplechase on opening day was the screwiest of all time. Beside horses falling for a pasttime and Jockey Wines just about going off War Port at every fence and just making a move, the Clem Spring runner ducked inside a beacon and was pulled up to go back on the course. Jockey Poland sent him to the final fence to complete the course. However, the jumper refused to leap, not once but about eight times. At long last the jump was made and he finished the course for the $25, fourth money. The stable of Mrs. Myrtle McNey must have fared pretty well off those three winning efforts of Tyr at Marlboro. They lost him out of the final start but claimed him back again Monday. They also took Butcher Boy after his winning effort. They had previously taken Glitter Girl out of her winning race at Marlboro. It looks like they really have a stable of runners. Jockey Willie Dufford was in rare form for the holiday program here. After riding both ends of the double, he came back to ride two more winners and bring his total for the day to four. M. B. (Pap) Goss was another one that was really leveling here opening day. After giving his stable a good rest, Pap entered two, Barograph and Hot Man. The former was 20-1 and got beat a neck and the latter was 9-1 and won by three lengths. They would have been a nice parley to get home. Be seeing you.

Sparkling Gem Scores His Third Straight Victory

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 2.—Sparkling Gem, a 2-year-old gelding owned by Harry Sandrock, scored his third victory in three starts at the meeting here today when he won Narragansett Parks Nantucket purse at 6 furlongs.

Jockey Al Wolfe snugged Sparkling Gem along the rail until half way through the far turn, where he took him to the outside and easily ran down those in front.

At the finish Sparkling Gem was 2¼ lengths in front of the Valdina Farms' Valdina Fair. Third money went to W. E. Boeing's Speedway, which was a head back of Valdina Fair and 2½ lengths in front of Mrs. H. G. Good's All Glee.

Brownies Hope For Big Things From "D" Leaguer

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 2—Hoping to come up with a Sid Hudson, who made a successful jump from Class D to the Washington Senators, the St. Louis Browns today purchased Clarence Iott, left-handed strikeout king with Paragould of the Northeast Arkansas League. He will join the Browns immediately.

Iott struck out 30 batters in a 16-inning game early in July and three days later fanned 15 in a 9-inning game. He has won 11 and lost five with Paragould.

The Browns made the deal for Iott through their San Antonio, Tex., farm, which had the 22-year-old lefty out on option with Paragould.

Two San Antonio players, Outfielder Pete Kraus and Shortstop Bobby Neighbors, were recalled by the Browns. The date they will report was indefinite.

Joey Archibald, holder of the New York-Maryland version of the world's featherweight championship, who fights Chalky Wright, Pacific Coast colored star and No. 1 contender, in 15-round title bout Thursday, September 11, at Griffith Stadium, is limbering up in front of mirror at his room in the hotel. Here's Joey looking at himself. Sparring in front of a mirror is one of the champ's habits, he says. Archibald works out at Turner's Arena at 1 p. m. today; Wright an hour later

Archibald, who arrived here from California yesterday, is to go into the ring this afternoon at 1 o'clock while Wright, who reported here from New York last night, will follow him into action an hour later. Wright was accompanied here by Manager Eddie Walker. Promoter Alvis yesterday completed arrangements whereby he leased the Arena from Promoter Joe Turner for the training period. The workouts of both fighters will be open to the public. It also was announced that Archibald's workouts daily will be broadcast from Turner's Arena over Station WINX by Sportscaster Sam Lawder between 1:05 and 1:15 o'clock.

A fine response to the advance sale for the championship show was reported yesterday as tickets were made available at Griffith Stadium; The Sport Center, Eighth and D Street, N. W.; Capital Grill, 1228 U. N. W.; Benny Bortnick's, Twelth and F, S. W., and Jack Tulloch's, Alexandria, Va. Tickets are priced at $1.20, $3.60 and $5.00, tax included.

Archibald, victorious in 20 consecutive bouts locally, will be handled by Ben ("Evil Eye") Finkel until Trainer Charley Goldman arrives within the next day or so. Finkel has appeared in Archibald's corner 20 times since the Patent Leathers Kid from Providence, R. I., started boxing as a preliminary boy here and Archibald has emerged victorious on every occasion.

room, I took out my two fan telegrams and read them over several times to stimulate myself.

One was from the vice president of the Walter Haight Club, Brother Benton, and reads: "Nation overlooked Business High School's greatest third string fullback stop National apologies extended with invitation to report to the Bears-All Star game in time for famous one minute to go play stop great stuff if you can charter clipper to swoop down on field with helmet on stop helmet on you not clipper stop luck."

I answered that with: "See nothing to be gained by facing Chicago Bears at this time stop I am ready but doubt condition of All Stars stop believe I would show to better advantage against Bears as Redskins' fullback stop airplane people have promised to make clipper with zipper to take care of me in such emergencies stop good time Business High School stop better time Redskins" (signed) First Down Haight.

The other telegram is from A. J. Hendley, 1620 Fuller Street Northwest and reads: "Your dear boss letters going over big stop may have to cancel subscription to The Post because I was late for work again today stop laid on floor laughing and missed bus stop why not get bom to send you to Hawaii stop fruit cheap there stop look at money you would save on old fashions."

Now, Boss, there's a telegram that was unsolicited. Just think of it, he probably paid a couple of bucks to send me that wire and I hardly know the man, except that he was the winner of the Walter Haight Club contest I staged last spring.

Well, Boss, I have whistled "Hail to The Redskins" all the way across the Nation and for more than two weeks here. I have given Coach Flaherty a speak preview of my forward passing and my drop-kicking. I've pulled in my stomach and poked out my chest. Nothing has happened.

So today I marched right into the Redskins' dressing room and demanded a uniform. "Look here, Flaherty," said I, "There is no use beating around the bush, "I'm a better fullback than Andy Farkas and I come from just as good a family. You want to beat the Bears, don't you? Well, give me a uniform and let me get out there and show you something. If you don't I'll put my triple curse on you and the Bears will beat you 173 to 0 this year."

Coach Flaherty simply replied, "Yes, sir."

And so today I was in uniform. Trainer Doc Maur rushed around and fittted me out in big league style. Vic Carroll put up a squawk when I picked up his No. 26 jersey and pulled it over my shoulder pads. Coach Flaherty heard him and said, "Haight, please don't take Carroll's jersey; we needy him at guard."

"Now listen, coach," I replied, "with me in there we won't need any guards. I can do my own blocking and charging on offense and it's a cinch with me backing up the line you won't need any guards on defense."

Coach Flaherty said, 'Yes sir."

Well, Boss, there wasn't any scrimmage today but I was right in there. The Redskin signals were designed for college graduates, so I learned them in 5 minutes.

Well, a photographer just happened by. He didn't have anything to do at the studio, so he came out to the practice field to keep his camera in shape. He saw me in the backfield with Frank Filchock, Wilbur Moore and Dick Todd and darned if he didn't snap my picture.

Always your ace,

25-YARDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Slept three in bed last night—me and two guys named Charley Horse.

Nats Face Macks; Call Back Ortiz

Lewis will be shuffled back to third base from right field for the third time this season, meaning that George Archie will be benched. Ortiz has been playing right field for Charlotte, where he was one of the leading hitters in the league and led the circuit with 33 two-baggers.

Ortiz will bat fifth in the Nats' and stole 20 bases for Charlotte lineup. He is a right-handed hitter despite his 6 feet 3 inches and 200 pounds.

For today's battle against the Athletics, Manager Harris will send Sid Hudson to the mound. The Nats play six consecutive games with the A's before the Western clubs make their last invasion of the season. The A's are in seventh place by a 3½ game margin over the Nats.

Columbus Is Assured A Tie for Pennant

Columbus, Ohio, September 2 (AP). Staging a two-run rally in the ninth inning to defeat Toledo, 7 to 6, Columbus tonight clinched at least a tie for the 1941 American Association pennant. Columbus is six full games ahead of second-place Louisville and each team has six games to play.

King Pin Match

Russ Diehl's Brookland Recreation District League quintet will be lost to Jimmie Moore's King Pin team tonight in a special warmup match at 8 o'clock. Spectators are invited.

Worsham and Mrs. Godfrey Golf Winners

Lewis Worsham, jr., may not have made the grade at Hersbey but he came back here to win another one-day tournament yesterday, pairing with Mrs. J. F. Godfrey to take the Lady-Pro affair at Congressional Country Club. Play was three partners, combined score.

Worsham missed a little putt on the eighteenth green and still played the long par 72 course in 68 shots, four better than regulation figures for the only sub-par score of the day among the 12 professionals.

Worsham's 68 and Mrs. Godfrey's 92—9, 83, gave the team a 151 total, low for the day by two shots.

Two duos tied for second, Host Pro Wiffy Cox, with a good tee-to-green round but no putting for a 74 and Mrs. A. C. Minnix, Columbia, with 93-14, 79, 153. Cliff Spencer, East Potomac pro, and Mrs. W. Marion Falls, Columbia, were included in the tie, Spencer with par 72 and Mrs. Falls, 94-13, 81 for a net 153.

The Kenwood combination of George Diffenbaugh and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas made the prize list with a 154 total, Diffenbaugh with 73 and Mrs. Thomas, 92-11, 81, for 154.

Spencer, who was even par at the twelfth hole and finished with three birdies for his 72, took second money in the pro sweepstakes. George Diffenbaugh, out in 39 and back in 34 despite a quartet of three-putt greens had 73 to tie Al Houghton, who was 3 under par playing the ninth hole, for third.

Worsham's round included five birdies as he dropped several 15-foot putts but he also missed a short one on the first hole and three-putted the twelfth green. It was Lew's third victory in the last four pro-partner tournaments.

4 Teams Have Entered Sandlot Tournament

Four teams have already entered the Metropolitan Sandlot Baseball Tournament which opens next Monday at Ballston Stadium, but officials are seeking more strong nines for competition. Especially invited to play are the Colesville Cardinals. Reliance Insurance and Little Tavern teams. Managers of any club wishing to enter should call CHestnut 2770 or OXford 1630-J after 6 p. m.

Tarboro Sends Strong Team To Tank Meet

Tarboro Civic Swim Club of North Carolina may not be numerically strong in Saturday night's swimming meet, scheduled at East Potomac pool under the President's Cup Regatta Committee auspices, but the Tarheels expect to give a good account of themselves.

One boy, Billy Powell, and five girls will carry Tarboro's banner. Powell will swim in the 100-meters free style race. He'll oppose a crack field that includes Bill Wright, recently returned from Michigan, Charley Rogers, former Harvard tankman, and Howard McAdoo, a private stationed at Fort Belvoir and swimming for Airport Pool.

Powell, unfortunately, will be up against Wright at an inopportune time, for Bill is gunning for revenge on McAdoo for a recent beating in the Airport pool.

Tarboro in the women's 100-meter free style will be represented by Ruby Hudson, Ethel Laughlin, Barbara Moore and Iula Newsome. In the backstroke, it will have Miss Laughlin and Gwen Bateman. Miss Moore and Ruby Hudson will swim the breast stroke and later team up with Miss Laughlin in the 150-yard medley relay.

This should be one of the season's best meets and will be a fitting finale to a summer of intense activity.

411 Set High As Cab Pinmen Open Season

Charlie Smith helped the Diamond Cab League off to an auspicious start last night at Brookland with a 160 game and 411 set that enabled his Ray Steelers to win team highs, after a 630 game and 1694 set, the latter likely to stand for some weeks as high. Smith's team won the odd game from Shoreham. Franklin's 151—342 for Calvert helped set the champion Restaurant boys down in two out of three while Hank Carter's 144 single and 373 set was what Hotels needed to defeat Service Station in the odd tilt. George Simons posted 155—384 for Auto Sales to help them to a 1675 team set, which included a dummy, and two straight from Mount Pleasant, while Walter Reed did likewise to the Greyhound lads. Facer's 125—345 for Brightwood aided in a two-game win over Uptown. The Diamond Cab League wins the honor of opening the season for Metropolitan Washington duckpinners by last night's inaugural.

The Acettes of Arlington Bowling Center, with five wins out of five starts against some of Washington's best girls' teams, will try to add another to their credit column tonight when they mix with Hap Newman's Del Ray team at the latter's drives. Tom Murry is staking his hopes on Capt. "Mike" Peacock, Thelma Simmers, Kitty Rice, Mary Fike, Virginia Wright and Kitty Helms, while the Del Rayettes are comprised of Anne Hiden, Ruby Parry, Frances Wilson, Angela McMenimim and Evelyn Gay. The contest gets under way at 8 o'clock and spectators are invited.

Senate and I. B. M. Meet at Ballston

Senate Beer ten has its chance for revenge on the team which supplanted it as Washington softball champion last year when it faces International Business Machines tonight at Ballston Stadium at 8:30.

A Senate victory will end the D. C. Softball Association tournament, earning the Beermen a trip to Detroit for the national tournament in Detroit on September 10. An I. B. M. triumph will make another clash of the rivals necessary, deadlocking the clubs with the same number of losses and victories in the local tournament.

On the mound it will be Abe Rosenfield, veteran southpaw, pitching for Senate against Pete Mastradonato, of the Machine ten.

Transit Pin League Opens Tommorrow

The Capital Transit Bowling League will start its fourth season at 9:15 p. m. at the Lafayette Bowling Alleys, Fifteenth and I Streets Northwest, with 22 teams on the floor.

Mr. E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., will roll out the first ball and also present last year's winners with a trophy.

13 Horses Vie In Foxcatcher National Cup

By the Associated Press

Fair Hill, Md., Sept. 2.—Thirteen horses have been named for the eighth annual renewal of the Foxcatcher National Cup Steeplechase here Saturday, and as usual the owners' entry list includes many of the best known names in the sport.

The 3-mile run over 19 breakneck brushes, American counterpart of the Liverpool Grand National, will be the third on the day's card of four races that have attracted a total of 60 nominations—one of the largest fields in the history of the event.

Heading those seeking the top prize in American steeplechasing is Louis B. Mayer's Ossaw. Entered again is R. V. N. Grambill's Parama, that finished second behind Cartermoor in last year's running. Conspicuously absent, however, is the famous Farndale, 1939 winner. Destroyed after he fell on the last jump last year and broke his leg.

Others entered for the cup are Alvin Untermeyer's Kellsboro; Stephen C. Clark, jr.'s Fay Cottage; E. B. Schley's Frederic II, the Log Cabin Stud's Chuckatuck; Rokeby Stables' Meeting House; Mrs. L. E. Stoddard, jr.'s Milano II; Silliman Evans' Killmalock; C. K. Bassett's Corrigan; F. Ambrose Clark's La Touche; Brooks Parker's Court Man and C. Mahlon Kline's Our Sailor.

The Fair Hill Steeplechase—2 miles of brush—has drawn 20 entries, the largest number for any of four races. There are 15 entries for the Lewisville flat race, 7 furlongs on grass, and 12 for the Big Elk flat run of 15 furlongs on the grass.

Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stables has six entries in the four races, Mrs. Esther du Pont Weir has five and Brooks Parker, Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott's Montpeller, Alvin Untermeyer and C. Mahlon Kline have four each.

Drive Friends And Save Gas, Board Urges

The District Petroleum Conservation Commission yesterday urged citizens' associations to aid in a "drive your neighbor to work campaign" to conserve gasoline. But, at the same time, it warned against girls accepting lifts from persons they do not know.

The committee said it believed the campaign should be conducted on a neighborhood basis rather than city-wide. One suggestion was that bulletin boards be placed in public places where drivers may register as willing to carry persons to work. But, it added:

"Precautions should be taken to avoid undesirable incidents which might result if female passengers ride with persons not well known to them."

The committee said that the so-called neighborly campaign would serve to conserve gasoline. It suggested that several persons now riding to work in their own cars agree to use only one for a certain period.

A service to aid workers in getting home has been inaugurated at the Quartermaster Corps office in the Railroad Retirement Building. The service is called "Car Carriers Corps."

Members of the new corps who drive to work, post their names and telephone numbers on the bulletin board. The plan was devised to conserve gasoline by using fewer cars.

Meanwhile, a 10 per cent over-all curtailment of gasoline deliveries for this month was announced by Acting Petroleum Coordinator Davies. This would mean a 15 per cent cut for "nonessential" motorists. The rationing program is about the same as that in effect during the last two weeks of August. However, needs of commercial, agricultural and emergency vehicles will continue to be met in full. Supplies of all Eastern retail outlets will be cut 10 per cent under the July consumption.

Railroads Cut Rates

A railroad spokesman announced that Eastern and Western railroad lines have joined in a 50 per cent crude oil freight rate cut. This is to facilitate shipments from the Southwest to the East. The present rate is 5 cents a gallon. The proposed reduction would leave the cost of train-shipped oil a cent and a half a gallon above the steamship tanker rate of 1 cent.

At the same time, the Maritime Commission asked for bids for the construction of sea-going, diesel-powered tugboats. There is a possibility some of them may be used to tow oil-carrying barges which the commission contemplates to build. Bids will be opened September 23. It is not known how many tug boats will be built.

Retail Prices Of Dresses Due To Rise by 20%

New York, Sept. 2.—The cost of labor and materials already has increased to such an extent that, despite the establishment of price ceilings on cotton and rayon goods by the Government, the retail prices of dresses 'must be raised by as much as 20 per cent in the near future," Morris Kolchin, executive director of the Affiliated Dress Manufacturers Association, an association of more than 300 dress firms, stated yesterday.

Mr. Kolchin said that an announcement made recently by Leon Henderson, administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, in connection with placing a ceiling on rayon, had been interpreted as indicating that lower prices might be expected on dresses and other finished textile products.

Rise Is Compulsory

"Unfortunately, this is not the the case," Mr. Kolchin declared. "As a matter of fact, these new ceiling prices are higher than the prices manufacturers paid for the same materials last month. The price ceilings established on various textiles and yarns were not imposed until prices had increased considerably. Despite everything the dress manufacturers can do to conform to the Government's request to keep prices as low as possible, a rise in price is compulsory.

"In case of rayon," he continued, "price increases range from 10 per cent to 50 per cent; one large manufacturer states that the price of rayon alpaca, one of the principal fabrics used in dressmaking, has risen from 41 cents to 60 cents a yard. Woolens are up approximately 15 per cent or more, while cottons have risen as much as 80 per cent in some cases.

"The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics' latest report, as of August 16, shows that the wholesale price of all textile products has risen on an average of more than 20 per cent. Another index, Irving Fisher, shows the increase in textile prices to be 36 per cent during the year.

Materials Go Up

"In addtiion to indisputable increases in the costs of fabrics which go into dresses, the prices of buttons, belts, lace, trimmings, embroideries and similar materials have all increased, some jumping as much as 10 per cent in the last few days alone.

"Labor costs also have substantially increased all down the line. Recognizing that living costs had increased, New York dress manufacturers raised wages by 10 per cent for piece-goods workers and 8.5 per cent for workers on salaries, effective this week. This will add approximately 15 million dollars to the annual pay rolls."

Mr. Kolchin asserted that manufacturers have done everything within their power to keep prices down, but the situation is beyond their control. He said they are still delivering dresses to retail stores at prices contracted for last June and July and "are incurring heavy losses." As soon as these stocks are exhausted, he continued, 'it will be compulsory that prices be increased."

Record Ore Transport On Lakes Indicated

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 2 (AP).—With a record shipment of 11,496,303 tons during August bringing the season's total to September 1 to 51,712,711 tons from all Lake Superior ore docks, John Woodfill, M. A. Hanna Co. agent, today said every indication points to an all time season record of 75,000,000 tons before the close of navigation in November.

He estimated that approximately 10,000,000 tons will be shipped in September, about 9,500,000 tons in October and 4,500,000 tons in November, unless bad weather or an early reeze-up interferes.

The previous monthly high tonnage sent to lower lake ports this year was 11,81,199 tons in May.

Aircraft Stocks Register New Highs for Year In Post-Holiday Trade; Amusements Strong

New York, Sept. 2.—It was mainly a market for aircraft stocks today although a number of amusements and industrial specialties managed to give a good account of themselves.

The list started out a bit hesitantly as boardrooms attempted to sum up trend influences after the Labor Day recess. Gains then began to come into most departments and, at the best, ran to more than a point for favorites. Top marks were reduced in the majority of cases at the close and a sprinkling of minus signs was in evidence.

Activity boadened in the fornoon and dwindled after mid-day. At that, the turnover of 520,630 shares was the largest since Aug. 8 and compared with 351,680 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks retained a net advance of .1 of a point at 48.8.

Moderately bullish sentiment was attributed partly to the red counter-offensive against the Nazis and the persistence of a mild form of inflation psychology coincident with further strength of several commodities. Handicapping the rallying idea, however, was continued skepticism over taxes, priorities, price controls and materials shortages. Installment credit curbs which went into effect today presented another question for financial debate.

Consolidated Aircraft's proposal for a 100 per cent stock dividend remained as a prop for the aviations. In addition prospects for bigger manufacturing profits were seen in the talk of standardizing military pursuit planes, plus huge backlogs of federal orders and hopes for expanding buying from foreign countries. Climbing box office receipts aided some of the moving picture company shares.

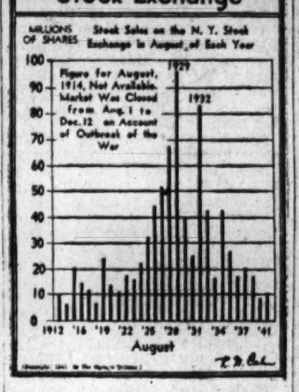
In the day's business budget, which was mostly unexciting, this week's steel mill operations were estimated off a shade, due largely to lack of steelscrap. U. S. Steel and Bethlehem were up only ¼ each.

Posting new 1941 highs were Consolidated Aircraft, Lockheed, Boeing, Pan American Airways, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount Pictures.

Modest improvement was shown by Chrysler, J. I. Case, American Smelting, Great Northern, Southern Railway, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Standard Oil (N. J.), International Nickel, Allied Chemical and du Pont.

A trifle in arrears were U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, General Electric, Anaconda, Kennicott, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Eastman Kodak and Woolworth.

August Sales on the Stock Exchange



In the Curb, Singer Mfg. was up 6 points and Draper Corporation 2 on meager deals. Higher were Bell Aircraft, Fairchild Aviation and Irving Air Chute. Among losers were Gulf Oil, Creole Petroleum and Humble Oil. Volume here was around 121,000 shares against 82,000 in the previous full session.

A high degree of selectivity prevailed in today's bond market and, with the exception of a few special situations, price changes either way were fractional.

Turnover fell to $4,898,800, par value, from $5,471,000 last Friday. All five groups in the Associated Press averages remained unchanged.

Some of the best performers on the upside included Pittsburgh & West Va. 4½s at 65¼, Warren Bros. 6s at 77¼, Burlington 4½s at 70⅝, Hudson Coal 5s at 39½, Lehigh Valley-Hudson Terminal 5s at 50½ and International Hydro Electric 6s at 33.

The general run of foreign dollar bonds were only about steady. Haiti 6s ran up 3¾ points to 60 and Colombia 6s were 1¼ higher at 41¼. Tokyo Electric Light 6s and Brazil 6½s were among those losing moderate amounts.

Cotton Leads New Bulge in Commodities

By the Associated Press

Commodity futures prices bounded upward yesterday in one of the sharpest opening advances of recent weeks, pushed higher by broad buying which followed upward revision of farm parity prices and President Roosevelt's comment that the European war might be prolonged.

A variety of other factors influenced prices, most of them adding to the bullish sentiment.

New York cotton futures closed 90 cents to $1.10 a bale higher after profit-taking cut into the peak gains of as much as $1.85 a bale.

World sugar futures climbed .11½ to .14 of a cent a pound to new seasonal highs independent of domestic products as the outlook for export sales brightened. The domestic contract eased.

At Chicago, soybeans gained 5 to 6 cents a bushel, the rise carrying other gains up briefly. Wheat and corn, however, ran into selling pressure and closed near the day's lowest levels. Wheat was ⅝ cent a bushel lower to ¾ higher, and corn unchanged to ¼ cent higher.

Chicago livestock prices were irregular, hogs losing 10 to 25 cents a hundredweight, cattle holding steady to 15 cents lower and lambs rising 15 to 25 cents a hundredweight.

Prices of spot commodities took part in the advance, carrying the Associated Press index of 35 cash staples upward again to a new 4 year high at 92.56 per cent of the 1926 average from 92.50 per cent Saturday.

Steel Rate Drops Slightly in Week

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute reported today that United States steel mills were expected to operate this week at 96.3 per cent of capacity.

The rate is .2 of one per cent less than last week, the Labor Day holiday closing of some mills cutting into output. It compared with operations of 96.3 per cent a month ago and 82.5 per cent a year ago.

The current production rate was on a revised basis of an annual domestic capacity of 86,148,700 tons. The country's capacity previously had been rated at 84,152,292 tons a year.

A. T. & T. Issue Is 95% Absorbed

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Stockholders of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. have subscribed to about 95 per cent of the $234,000,000 in convertible bonds recently offered them.

It was stated today subscriptions on hand totaled roughly $222,000,000. The money received for the bonds will be used to finance the company's huge construction program.

Some time in the near future the company is expected to make its competitive bidding call to obtain funds to refinance $94,306,000 of 5½ per cent debentures which have been called for redemptions on November 1.

Three underwriting firms were reported today forming investment groups to make offers for a $95,000,000 issue of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. bonds expected to be offered soon for competitive bidding.

They were Morgan, Stanley & Co., Mellon Securities Corporation, together with Halsey, Stuart & Co., and Solomon Bros. & Hutzler and associates.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 2 (AP).—Political developments again dominated the grain futures markets today and prices of wheat, at times almost equaled the season's peaks, while soybeans and oats established new highs for the current crop.

Soybeans soared 4 cents at the start, largely in sympathy with the sharp upturn in cotton futures and virtually all other grains also rose. Despite profit-taking beans finished the session near the day's best levels with extreme gains of 6 cents a bushel, 4 cents at the highest prices since May, 1937. Best quotations for wheat and corn were not maintained and all deliveries closed at or near the day's lowest.

Wheat finished ⅝ cent lower to ¾ higher than Saturday's close. September 1.13¼@1.13½, December 1.17½@1.17¾, May 1.20¾@1.20⅞; corn ⅛ up to ¼ off, September 77⅛, December 81½@81¾; oats ⅜@¾ up; rye ⅛@⅝ higher; lard 12½ to 22½ up and soybeans advanced 5¼ to 6 cents.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 18 to 22 points higher today on the crest of a wave of buying this broke on parity under late profit taking.

Private cotton reports tended to indicate the Federal estimate due September 8 might revise downward the 1941-42 production figure, placed at 10,817,000 bales on August 1.

Other reports said farmers were holding much of their crop for still higher prices, marketing only about 25 per cent in some sections.

Gain in Bank Loans Shrink During Week

By the Associated Press

Banks in the Nation's leading cities increased their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans for the eighteenth consecutive week, but the gain of nine million dollars was considerably smaller than the increases recently reported.

In the preceding week such loans rose by 34 million dollars, and a week earlier they gained by 50 million dollars.

The Federal Reserve Board noted a decrease of 63 million dollars in reserve balances with Federal Reserve banks and an increase of 58 million dollars in bank holdings of "other securities."

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement today gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on August 27, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Cotton Income Seen Largest Since 1929

New York, Sept. 2 (U.P.).—The New York Cotton Exchange said today cotton growers' income this season probably would be the largest since 1929, counting Federal payments and loans as well as receipts from sale of the crop and seed.

The estimate, based on Government crop figures of August 3 and the current price for cotton and cottonseed, put 1941-'42 cotton income at $1,238,589,000, compared with $912,769,000 last season and a 1929 total of $1,400,270,000.

Italy Plans Another War Bond Issue

Rome, Sept. 2 (AP).—Italian banks announced today the imminence of a new government bond issue, the second within eight months, to help finance the war.

Circulars urged customers to buy bonds as a patriotic duty. Nine-year, 5 per cent treasury bonds are expected to be offered September 15 at 97.50 lira per 100 lira, as were similar bonds issued last February.

Finance Minister Thaon Di Revel estimated in April that Italy's budget deficit this year would amount to 65 billion lira, about $3,422,000,000.

Sharp Upturn Anticipated in Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said yesterday that withholding of large quantities of wheat from the market by growers might cause the grain to advance at least 10 cents a bushel above present levels within a few months despite existence of the largest domestic supply on record.

Wheat now is bringing farmers about 45 per cent more than a year ago. Latest reports show a local average market price of 89 cents a bushel compared with 61 cents a year ago.

A Government commodity loan program, the bureau said, would contribute to the expected advance. Under that program, farmers who cooperated with the AAA wheat production program this year might obtain loans at an average local market rate of 98 cents a bushel.

Must Pay Loan Rate

The bureau said that although this season's supply had been estimated at 1,340,000,000 bushels, mills and other buyers most likely would have to pay the loan rate or more to get sufficient grain to fill their requirements.

The bureau estimated that upward of 400 million bushels of this year's 950 million-bushel crop would be stored under Government loan. This quantity would be in addition to 185 million bushels from previous crops, held by the Government. Farmers themselves normally use 150 million for feed, seed and food.

Seeding Is Less

This would leave only about 608,-million bushels to fill needs of millers, exporters, trade inventory and reserve stocks—which in themselves normally amount to more than 600 million bushels.

Another factor said to be operating for higher prices, the bureau said, was an indication that wheat seeding for the 1942 crop would be only about 55 million acres compared with 63,500,000 acres for the 1941 crop. The AAA has asked for such a reduction.

Earnings Reports

Archer-Daniels-Midland Co., makers of linseed oil, soybean oil and other products, reported for the year ended June 30 consolidated net profit of $3,103,166, equal to $5.69 a share on the common stock. This compared with $3,047,014, or $5.41 a share in the preceding year. Provision for taxes was on the basis of the revenue bill passed by the House August 4.

Diamond Match Co. reported for the six months ended June 30 consolidated net profit of $1,002,991, equal to 79 cents a share on common stock against $1,003,236 or 79 cents a share in the first half of last year.

American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. reported for the six months ended June 30 net profit of $389,296, equal to 32 cents a share on the common stock against $253,640 or 12 cents a share in the first half of 1940.

Grumman Aircraft Engineering Co. reported for the six months ended June 30 indicated net profit of $747,218 before provision for Federal income taxes and excess profits taxes against $329,711 before Federal taxes in the 1940 period. Unfilled orders June 30 amounted to $74,500,000 against $8,982,802 a year earlier.

Another half-hour of music—we've mentioned a half-dozen or so in the past few weeks—gets under way on WJSV at 6:30 tonight.

It's to be called "The Kay Thompson Festival," that seeming to be a logical name for a show that is run by and stars a girl named Kay Thompson. Kay Thompson is nationally known for her work as a director of vocal choruses. You've heard those super choruses on radio programs with Andre Kostelanetz and on the Chesterfield programs.

But this time they're practically to have the entire show to themselves. Acting as mistress of ceremonies of the program, Kay is also to do solo work and also to act in comedy skits and, then, just to see that she doesn't have too much free time on her hands, each week she's to present a new song which she's written herself. When you consider that most song writers consider themselves pretty ambitious when they write two or three a year, you realize that Miss Thompson has taken a job for herself.

Walter Gross, who's something of a wizard at the piano, is to be in charge of the musical accompaniments—that is, he's to lead the orchestra as well as play the piano.

All very soothing for us savage beasts.

A pleasing trend toward more high-toned musical programs in radio seems to be under way.

Another half-hour of music—we've mentioned a half-dozen or so in the past few weeks—gets under way on WJSV at 6:30 tonight.

It's to be called "The Kay Thompson Festival," that seeming to be a logical name for a show that is run by and stars a girl named Kay Thompson. Kay Thompson is nationally known for her work as a director of vocal choruses. You've heard those super choruses on radio programs with Andre Kostelanetz and on the Chesterfield programs.

But this time they're practically to have the entire show to themselves. Acting as mistress of ceremonies of the program, Kay is also to do solo work and also to act in comedy skits and, then, just to see that she doesn't have too much free time on her hands, each week she's to present a new song which she's written herself. When you consider that most song writers consider themselves pretty ambitious when they write two or three a year, you realize that Miss Thompson has taken a job for herself.

Walter Gross, who's something of a wizard at the piano, is to be in charge of the musical accompaniments—that is, he's to lead the orchestra as well as play the piano.

All very soothing for us savage beasts.

Three Soldiers Killed, 22 Hurt In W.Va. Crash

By the Associated Press

Rainelle, W. Va., Sept. 2.—Three soldiers returning to Camp Lee, Va., after a weekend furlough were killed and three others were critically injured today when a truck overturned on U. S. Route 60 and tumbled 22 men against a rock-studded hillside.

William J. Steiger, 25-year-old draftee from Louisville, Ky., died instantly of a broken neck. Albert Alvin Johnston, of Louisville, and Roscoe Burnette, of Cincinnati, Ohio, died shortly before noon in an East Rainelle hospital.

Critically injured were Ernest W. Wohr, spine fractured; Philip Wayne Scott, fractured skull, and John Barnett, fractured spine.

The other 16 men, all from in or near Louisville or Indianapolis, Ind., were held for treatment.

The soldiers, who hired the truck last Saturday at Richmond, Va., spent the weekend in Kentucky and Indiana. Locke said they were hurrying home to meet a 7 a. m. return deadline at camp.

Actress Makes Court 'Debut'

ANNABELLA, blonde film actress and wife of Actor Tyrone Power, appeared in New York State Supreme Court yesterday for examination before trial of a suit by Thomas Hays Hunter, who charges she failed to meet terms of a contract signed with him in March, 1937. In excited, French-accented English, Annabella said, "I am very sorry, but I do not understand anything about contracts." She had previously denied Hunter's allegations, said under questioning that she recalled signing certain contracts, but that some of them were unobtainable in Nazi-occupied France

War on Rats Renewed Under Control Board

Washington, the city of grandeur and magnificent vistas, is to witness a renewal of its intermittent campaign to rid its dwellings and streets of rats.

In announcing the fresh campaign yesterday, Acting Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger urged the cooperation of all civic groups and of all householders. At the same time, he announced formation of a rodent control committee and appointment of a coordinator whose duties will be to keep in touch with rat-control activities of citizens' associations. The coordinator will be Ambrose Bell, public health engineer.

Dr. Seckinger said that the rat-control problem has increased because of the greater concentrwation of population here since the national defense program went into effect. He urged that trash cans be tightly covered and no refuse or food be left where it is accessible to rats.

A block-to-block survey will be made to determine the localities where rats are prevalent. Cooperation will be sought from schools, parent-teacher associations, churches, and others. Each association will be expected to underwrite the cost of materials used in baiting rodents.

"The block managers will record their catch and kill," the announcement said, "as determined by the poison distributed. The health department will mix the bait in accordance with approved methods."

In conclusion, the announcement said that in cases where the rats are too smart to eat the bait, trapping methods will be employed.

Dr. Seckinger said he did not know how many rats there were in Washington, but he judged the population to be about a million.

"I understand," he said, "that there is a rat to every human here."
